TWENTY-EIGHTH STREET BUILDING: 1855-1872

1852 · MILESTONES · 1949

- 1852 The Jews' Hospital in New York is incorporated for "benevolent, charitable and scientific purposes." Sampson Simson is the first President.
- 1855 The new Hospital is opened on May 17th, in a four-story building with 45 beds, at 138 West 28th Street, between Seventh and Eighth Avenues. The original Staff of ten men includes Dr. Valentine Mott and Dr. Willard Parker. In accordance with the usage of the period, there is no separation of Medical and Surgical Services, because surgery is not considered sufficiently important; nor are there any specialized services.
- 1856 In its first full year the Hospital cares for 225 patients. Operating expenses total $5,493.
- 1862 The Hospital opens its wards to wounded Federal soldiers of the Civil War, installing additional beds and increasing its personnel for the purpose.
- 1866 To make it clear that the Hospital serves the community without distinction of race or religion, its name is changed to The Mount Sinai Hospital.
- 1868 The Ladies' Auxiliary Society is formed to assist in the work of the Hospital.
- 1872 The Hospital is moved into a new 3½-story building with a capacity of 120 beds, on Lexington Avenue from 66th to 67th Streets.

- 1872 The Medical Board and House Staff are organized at a meeting at the home of Dr. Willard Parker, who becomes first Chairman of the Board.
- 1872 The Hospital takes a bold step forward by appointing two women to professional positions—one to the House Staff and the other as Apothecary.
- 1873 The Outdoor Dispensary (Out-Patient Department) is formally established, with four divisions: Medical, Surgical, Gynecological, and Children's.
- 1877 Reflecting the advances in surgery and increase in surgical practice, the Hospital establishes separate in-patient Medical and Surgical Services.
- 1877 An in-patient Gynecological Department is established, headed by Dr. Emil Noeggerath, pioneer in the study of gonorrhea.
- 1878 Creating a precedent among New York hospitals, a separate service for in-patient care of children is established, through a legacy from Michael Reese of California. Dr. Abraham Jacobi heads this department.
- 1879 An Eye and Ear Service is organized, headed by Dr. Emil Gruening, who in 1888 performs one of the early mastoid operations in America.
- 1880 Dr. Arpad G. Gerster, early champion of Listerian surgery, is appointed Attending Surgeon.
- 1881 The School of Nursing is established, one of the country's pioneer nurses' training institutions. There are eight students when the School opens.
- 1883 Dr. Alfred Meyer begins the Hospital's Medical Library and looks after it for more than a decade when a Committee of the Medical Board is appointed to develop it further as the future Abraham Jacobi Library.
- 1883 The Hospital building is enlarged to a capacity of 190 beds, and an isolation building is added. Space for private patients is increased, indicating the emergence of the modern hospital as a medical center for all instead of an institution for the poor only.
- 1883 Dr. Edward Gamaliel Janeway, one of the great diagnosticians of his time, is appointed to the Staff.
- 1886 The Hospital grants its diploma to Dr. Josephine Walter, first woman in America to serve a formal internship.
- 1886 To relieve overcrowding of the Hospital and to care for patients who can be treated at home, a District Medical Service is organized, first of its kind in the city.
- 1890 The Out-Patient Department is greatly expanded, housed in a new building. Neurological, skin, and venereal disease clinics are established.
- 1893 The Laboratory is established, housed in a cloak room "not much larger than a bird's cage."
- 1895 The Genitourinary Service is established, with Dr. William F. Fluhrer as its first chief.

- 1900 The Hospital purchases its first X-ray machine.
- 1901 The cornerstone of the present group of hospital buildings is laid on May 22nd with Mayor Seth Low among the distinguished participants. The original ten buildings have a bed capacity of 456.
- 1904 The new Hospital buildings are dedicated on March 15th.
- 1905 A Department of Dietetics is established.
- 1906 The Social Service is formed, one of the earliest hospital services of this type in the country.
- 1909 An independent Otological Service is established.
- 1910 The Dental Department for in-patients is established—extended to the Out-Patient Department in 1925.
- 1910 The Hospital begins post-graduate medical instruction. Under-graduate medical instruction to students attending two of the city's medical schools had preceded it by several years.
- 1910 Physical Therapy is established as a separate department.
- 1911 The Cystoscopy Room is built and outfitted—enlarged and refitted in 1933.
- 1913 A large building program is initiated. Funds are collected for the Children's Pavilion and Dispensary, Private Pavilion, Laboratory Building, Director's Home, and Employees' Dormitory.
- 1915 Electrocardiography is instituted.
- 1916 Mount Sinai organizes Base Hospital No. 3 of the United States Army Medical Corps. In 1918, 24 physicians, 50 nurses, and 153 enlisted personnel serve with this Unit at Vauclaire, France.
- 1916 The Social Service Auxiliary is formed by women volunteers who attend to many wants of convalescent patients and of patients' families.
- 1917 The Federation for the Support of Jewish Philanthropic Societies is organized, with Mount Sinai as one of its constituents.
- 1919 The Children's Health Class is organized.
- 1920 The Psychiatry Clinic, one of the earliest in a general hospital, is established.
- 1922 The Private Pavilion, the Children's Pavilion, and the Blumenthal Auditorium are opened.
- 1923 The affiliation with the College of Physicians and Surgeons, for post-graduate medical instruction, is placed on a formal basis.
- 1924 The Occupational Therapy Department is established.
- 1924 A Metabolism Clinic is established.

- 1925 A beginning is made toward establishment of an endowment fund for support of medical research, hitherto precariously dependent on occasional donations.
- 1926 The weekly Clinical-Pathological Conferences, regularly attended by several hundred physicians, are expanded with enlarged facilities.
- 1927 The new building of the School of Nursing is completed, accommodating 476 residents.
- 1931 The Consultation Service is established, providing diagnostic service by specialists for patients of moderate means referred by their own physicians.
- 1931 The Semi-Private Pavilion is opened, increasing the capacity of the Hospital to over 800 beds. Group nursing, providing 24-hour nursing care at a much reduced cost, is introduced in this Pavilion.
- 1932 A separate Neurosurgical Service is created.
- 1933 To keep up the morale of convalescent patients, unemployed because of the depression, the Social Service Workroom is established.
- 1933 The Out-Patient Department building is modernized.
- 1934 The Journal of The Mount Sinai Hospital is established. It is distributed to universities and medical libraries throughout the world.
- 1935 The Medical and Surgical Pavilions are modernized.
- 1936 The Neustadter Home in Yonkers is affiliated with the Hospital as its institution for convalescents.
- 1936 The Isolation Ward is rebuilt and becomes the first in the city approved by the Department of Health for private patients.
- 1938 The Blood Bank is established under the direction of the Department of Hematology.

- 1942 The Third General Hospital of the United States Army is activated and leaves in 1943 for service in North Africa, Italy, and France.

- 1943 Semi-Private facilities are provided for children.
- 1944 The Greater Mount Sinai Development Fund is initiated for a post-war building and research program.
- 1944 Full-time positions are created in the Hospital for a Director of Medical Education and a Director of Clinical Research.
- 1945 The Third General Hospital returns from duty overseas.
- 1945 A separate Psychiatry Service is established and a full-time position is created for a Psychiatrist to the Hospital.
- 1946 Physicians, nurses, employees, and trustees who had served with the Armed Forces numbered nearly 900 before the end of hostilities.

THE REPORT OF THE PRESIDENT

THE history of a hospital contains many diverse facts of great human interest and it is not always easy to select the most impressive. In the 1948 report, I emphasized that a hospital should not be appraised by its buildings but rather by its personnel and their accomplishments. Yet, when due to years of acute financial depression followed by years of war and shortages of material, a progressive institution is barred for almost a generation from physical growth and rehabilitation, one may be pardoned for laying prime emphasis on modernization and expansion.

In my 1948 report I indicated that excavation for The Greater Mount Sinai had begun in July of that year. I am glad to report that it has been completed, as has substantially the foundation work for the new buildings and for the sub-surface structures. Because many have wondered why the excavation took so long, I shall take this opportunity to answer that question. On the Madison Avenue front of the land to be excavated there was a fully-tenanted apartment house. To have demolished that house promptly would have meant the dispossession of many families during a period of acute housing shortage. Despite the fact that the Hospital had the legal right to recover possession and proceed, it was felt that the moral obligation to afford a proper opportunity to the tenants to re-locate demanded as much delay as could be permitted without inflicting too great a penalty upon the Hospital.

Excavation up to the foundations of that building was completed within the scheduled time. Only then was the demolition of the last building begun, giving tenants almost a year of grace. Through the diligence of the Building Committee and the architects, the fabrication of steel was started and its erection—the contract for which has been let—will be undertaken early this year. There is likely to be a minimum of noise because the steel frame will be welded, not riveted.

Plans are under study for the rehabilitation of existing buildings. Except for superficial repair and decoration they have remained untouched for approximately 30 years. This rehabilitation cannot be begun until the completion of the new structures, but it is expected that the existing private pavilion, erected in 1922, will be thoroughly overhauled to afford greater patient comfort and more efficient operation. The cost of new construction, the equipment of new buildings and the rehabilitation of old buildings will substantially exceed assured funds available before the start in the Autumn of 1949 of the Building Fund solicitation by the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies. It is confidently expected that the deficit will be made good through this solicitation, in aid of which the Board and the staff of the Hospital have contributed generously and devoted much time and effort.

In 1949 a new project of major importance was strongly recommended to the Hospital. The Federation committee charged with planning the Building Fund Drive had been convinced by the testimony of authorities that a most important development would be the creation of a "Psychiatric Institute"—a building and a staff devoted exclusively to psychiatric study, research and education. It was held that in the years ahead the same scientific development in psychiatry might be attained as had been achieved in recent decades in medicine, surgery and the specialties.

Inasmuch as the Psychiatric Service at the Hospital has already been highly developed under the able leadership of Dr. M. Ralph Kaufman, it seemed logical to add to the Hospital's program a psychiatric entity to fulfil the aims so strongly recommended by the Federation experts. Accordingly, application was made to the Building Fund Committee of Federation to include such a unit in The Greater Mount Sinai program. Unanimous approval was obtained, provided that sufficient funds would be procured to pay fully the cost of the proposed building and to supply a capital fund sufficient to meet its estimated operating deficit for the first five years. The estimated aggregate sum, as approved by Federation, for building, equipment and the capital fund is $4,000,000.

Since its fundamental purpose would be the development of the science of psychiatry and the training of psychiatric personnel, it is intended that a high degree of selectivity be exercised in the admission of in-patients and out-patients. Stress is to be placed on the study of selected cases for the greater eventual benefit of the community, rather than upon the therapy of individuals indiscriminately admitted. Because in psychiatry the human mind is a "test tube" for research, an effort will be made to admit mainly those who require help for disturbances then under study. Whether individuals are admitted as private, semi-private or ward patients, they will be studied and guided by the integrated staff and personnel of the Unit.

From available information, the proposed psychiatric unit can be—and we are confident it will be—an outstanding contribution to the mental health of the community, to the psychiatric services of all Federation societies, to the science of psychiatry and to the medical profession generally.

The general entrance for ward patients was changed last February from the former location, midway between Fifth and Madison Avenues on 100th Street, to the location previously used as an ambulance entrance. The change corrected crowding in the corridors and the circuitous routing of incoming patients to the Admitting Room. Furthermore, it enabled the former entrance to be securely locked evenings and nights when corridors are insufficiently attended. In February also the operating room for animals and the animal research facilities serving the present laboratories were substantially renovated.

An alteration completed in August gave the office of the Director more privacy, substantially improved the room itself and converted an unused adjacent room into a Trustees' Room. The Hospital is fortunate in that many Trustees gather at the Hospital on Saturday mornings and that small groups meet there on afternoons during the week. In this manner, the Board keeps constantly in touch with all phases of Hospital activity. Until the recent alteration, those meetings would take place either in the Director's room, thereby to some degree interrupting his activities, or in the Board Room on the second floor, which was too large for the purpose and too far removed from the Director's room. The alteration has made it possible for the Trustees to meet adjacent to the Director's room without unduly disturbing him.

Simultaneously, an alteration was undertaken in the Pediatric Pavilion to construct a ward for children requiring Orthopedic treatment. This was undertaken on the recommendation of the Pediatric and Orthopedic Services and was made possible by a grant for that purpose.

As will be fully dealt with in the report of the President of the Neustadter Home, a major development took place there in 1949. A survey in 1948 of the premises of the Neustadter Home showed them to be suited to the purposes of the institution before its affiliation with the Hospital, but indicated that many changes and additions were required to enable the Home to discharge its duties as a convalescent home affiliated with an acute general hospital. In accordance with plans prepared by Messrs. Kahn & Jacobs, architects, with the advice of the Building Committee of the Home, a program of expansion and renovation was begun. Had it not been for the great generosity of Miss Bertha Weinman, who bequeathed her entire residuary estate to the Hospital as a memorial to her deceased brother, Moses Weinman, this work would not have been possible. Beyond the complete modernization of existing facilities, there was built a substantial addition, dedicated to the memory of Mr. Moses Weinman, in accordance with the provisions of Miss Weinman's will.

I must express the great satisfaction felt by the Board of Trustees of the Hospital when they met at the Neustadter Home last December 11 for the opening services of the rehabilitated Home and the dedication of the Moses Weinman Memorial Building. A most impressive work had been done entitling the architects, the builders, the Building Committee and all members of the Neustadter Home Board to the heartiest congratulations.

The Hospital learned early last year that two apartment houses immediately adjacent to the Hospital were available for purchase—19-23 East 98th Street, adjoining the Nursing Residence, and 20 East 100th Street, the southwest corner of 100th Street and Madison Avenue. Both were acquired. The 100th Street property will give the Hospital sole ownership of the entire square block bounded by Madison Avenue, 100th Street, Fifth Avenue and what formerly was 99th Street. The other will make possible the transfer of some departments that lend themselves to that location and free space in existing Hospital buildings for services more properly belonging there.

The acquired buildings eventually will afford living quarters for senior employees and members of the medical staff, and offices for physicians connected with the Hospital. It has been part of the Hospital plan to provide living quarters and offices for physicians connected with the Hospital so that they might devote a few hours a day to private practice and the balance of their time to the Hospital. With two or three physicians in rotation sharing the same office, a minimum of expense would be entailed for each of them. Both buildings were self-supporting and were purchased at prices that provide a modest income on the investment.

The Hospital last year fulfilled a previously announced plan of having its Pediatric Service directed by a highly qualified physician devoting his entire time and attention to the Hospital, its patients, its research and its educational program.

The Hospital was fortunate in being able to attract Dr. Horace L. Hodes to become Pediatrician to the Hospital. Dr. Hodes, who had been an Associate Professor in Pediatrics at Johns Hopkins University Medical School and the director of its affiliated Sydenham Hospital in Baltimore, came here with an enviable professional record.

Although the Pediatric Service has always been an important one here, it will become still more important when the new Maternity Building and its facility for premature infants are completed. Dr. Hodes began his service at the Hospital last July and has already generated among his professional associates and the governing body a high degree of respect and admiration.

The Hospital had anticipated that it would be necessary, in order to attract a pediatrician of note, to provide adequate laboratory facilities. Through the generosity of the Dorothy H. and Lewis Rosenstiel Foundation, a new laboratory was built, affording in addition to needed laboratory space, administrative and other facilities.

Another noteworthy appointment to the professional staff was that of Dr. Bernard S. Wolf as Radiologist. Dr. Wolf will devote his full time to the Hospital, to patients, to research and teaching. It will be recalled that Dr. Marcy L. Sussman resigned as Radiologist in the Spring of 1949 to move to Arizona. Because Dr. Sussman had achieved a high professional standing, his resignation was a matter of profound regret. It was with distinct pleasure that the Hospital was able to obtain Dr. Wolf as his successor. Trained as an intern and resident of the Hospital, Dr. Wolf more recently had been the Physician in Charge of the New York Office of the Atomic Energy Commission. He began his service as Radiologist last September and has succeeded already in earning the high professional regard of his colleagues and the entire Hospital family.

There were other appointments on the Medical Staff during the year. Drs. Joseph Harkavy and Morris S. Bender, who reached the age of retirement from the active staff, were elevated respectively to the positions of Consulting Allergist and Consulting Otolaryngologist. Dr. Milton H. Adelman was elevated to the position of Anesthesiologist to the Hospital; Dr. Hans Strauss to the position of Associate Neurologist for Electroencephalography; Drs. Lawrence I. Kaplan and Mortimer Ostow to Adjunct Neurologists; and Dr. Robert S. Siffert to Adjunct Orthopedic Surgeon.

I report with regret the following resignations from the Medical Staff: Dr. Edward Goodman, Adjunct Surgeon; Dr. Marcus Schatner, Adjunct Psychiatrist; Dr. Robert S. Gilbert, Adjunct Dentist; and Dr. Joseph W. Jailer, Adjunct Physician for Endocrinology.

An agreement was reached last September between the Hospital and Hillside Hospital by which some space in the Out-Patient Building is shared with the Hillside Hospital so that it might render service to its psychiatric out-patients. This agreement was made after consultation between the staffs of both institutions and with the administrative advice of Dr. Steinberg, our Director. Hillside Hospital, which is devoted solely to the care of psychiatric patients, is located in Queens County and is therefore not easily accessible to patients requiring out-patient care. The arrangement has important functional aspects in that it contemplates a closer operating liaison between the psychiatric services of both institutions, through interchange of personnel at staff conferences and other complementary services.

During the year, Mr. Albert Forsch, who had served continuously for 30 years as a Trustee, felt that his long and faithful service as a Trustee should terminate. To the great regret of his fellow-Trustees, he tendered his resignation, but with his consent, was promptly elected as an Honorary Trustee. Mr. Forsch is the only Honorary Trustee serving the Hospital at this date. He was Secretary from 1921 to 1923; Third Vice-President from 1924 to 1928 and Second Vice-President from 1928 to 1937.

At the last meeting in 1949 of the Board of Trustees Mr. David M. Heyman was unanimously elected a Trustee of the Hospital and was welcomed by the Board at its first meeting last January.

The pleasure of announcing additions and new appointments sharpens the memory of those who in the past were friends and workers in the cause of bringing the Hospital to its present status. Death last year claimed its quota. Mr. Joseph S. Reckford, who in recent years had devoted himself most actively as a Trustee of the Hospital, was taken from us in the prime of life. His deep interest in the Hospital and his eagerness to serve left a vacancy on the Board which will be most difficult to fill.

Similarly, Mr. Samuel E. Jacobs, who had served as a Trustee from 1907 to 1918, and as an Honorary Trustee thereafter, passed away, as did Mr. David A. Schulte, a Trustee from 1922 to 1947; Mr. Eli Winkler, a Trustee in 1929 and 1930 and also a Director of the School of Nursing from 1925 to 1930; and Mr. Edwin M. Berolzheimer, a Trustee from 1928 to 1941 and a Director of the School of Nursing from 1924 to 1941.

The Hospital suffered a professional loss in the death of Dr. Robert T. Frank, founder and Director of its Endocrine Research Laboratory and its Gynecologist from 1925 to 1937, as well as its Consulting Gynecologist since 1937. He died last October 15 after a brief illness, depriving the Hospital and the community of the services of one of the leaders in his chosen specialty.

The Hospital has been pursuing its stated programs in medical education and in research under the leadership of Drs. Isidore Snapper and George Baehr, respectively. Progress was made in grouping research projects so that physicians and research workers in parallel or allied fields would have an appreciation of each other's work. From this program of grouping there has emerged a cardiovascular research team and the beginnings of similar teams in endocrinology, metabolism and nutrition, and in the study of radioactive isotopes. Such teams will meet regularly to discuss and program their work so that important planned procedures will replace small isolated projects and repetitious effort. As examples of some of the more important developments in current research, I submit the following:

A pump has been designed which bypasses and substitutes for the right heart. Thus the blood is pumped from the venous system directly into the lungs, and manipulations of and operations on the right auricle and ventricle have been made possible. This has been done successfully in animal experimentation and, after it has been thoroughly tested, it will be adapted to serve human patients.

Progress has been made in the fractionation of ragweed pollen and the separation and identification of the active allergen. It is hoped that the active allergen can actually be crystallized and that new knowledge of hayfever and the allergic phenomena surrounding it will be gained.

A new series of organic acids has been prepared by workers studying mono-molecular films of fatty acids. These are being tested for their applicability in immunochemistry.

A portable microplethysmograph has been constructed and is adding new findings in the study of diseases of the circulation and in certain types of congenital heart diseases.

Studies by x-ray diffraction have progressed so that they are beginning to parallel and complement our understanding of the morbid anatomy of disease, which hitherto could be studied only by the examination of gross specimens and microscopic sections. The study has produced new observations concerning the basic structure of parts of the heart and of normal and diseased bone.

Researches on renal function have enabled workers to apply new physiological techniques, with the result that important new observations have been made in cases of hypertension, carbon tetrachloride poisoning, and in patients who have had one kidney removed.

A newly equipped, air conditioned and sound-proofed department was provided for researchers in the field of hearing. The studies, using the speech otometer as a complement to the pure tone audiometer, are yielding precise comparative data especially useful in the selection of patients for operations to improve hearing and for the evaluation of surgical results after such operations.

The employment of the electrokymograph has made it possible to study further the movement of small portions of the heart. This has proved important in that we have been able to discover danger areas which, deprived of normal contractility, are subject to bulge or even rupture. Workers in this field have collected and published a large series of observations, which are now being used as the basis for a comparative study with the more orthodox methods of electrocardiographic phenomena.

The tabulation of key events, with dates, was so well received last year that I shall repeat it. The sequence follows:

Feb. 14—The new entrance for ward patients replacing the old ambulance entrance completed.

Feb. 21—The animal operating rooms and animal research facilities substantially renovated.

April 1—Dr. Marcy L. Sussman resigned to enter private practice.

May 2—Purchased properties at 20 East 100th Street and 19 East 98th Street for future use by the Hospital.

June 20—Appointment of Dr. Horace L. Hodes as the first full-time Pediatrician to the Hospital, and Dr. Bernard S. Wolf as full-time Radiologist.

Aug. 1—Apartment house at 25 East 99th Street demolished and last stage of excavations and foundations for new buildings begun.

Aug. 15—Construction begun to add a children's orthopedic ward to the Pediatric Pavilion.

Aug. 15—A Trustees' meeting room installed next to the Director's Office.

Sept. 29—Arrangements completed to install an out-patient service for Hillside Hospital in our OPD.

Oct. 31—The number of residencies was increased by seven in order to satisfy the requirements of specialty boards.

Dec. 1—Completion of the Rosenstiel laboratory for pediatrics occupying the entire third floor of the Pediatric Pavilion Annex.

The Federation of Jewish Philanthropies has continued to be the main philanthropic source of funds necessary to meet the annual operating deficit of the Hospital. The fact that annually substantial deficits are incurred by a voluntary hospital is itself justification for its existence. When a voluntary hospital ceases to be an institution to which the needy can apply for medical and surgical assistance, it loses its principal communal function. A voluntary hospital also must keep abreast of developments in the medical sciences and therefore requires constant additions to its plant and equipment. It must moreover keep its existing plant in good repair and make provision for expensive replacements. Were it not for the important assistance rendered by the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies in connection with operating and maintenance costs, as well as new buildings, the progress of the Hospital and the benefits conferred upon needy humanity would be seriously curtailed. It is with gratitude to Federation and to the numerous donors to it that I express the Hospital's appreciation and thanks.

Similarly, I express the warm gratitude of the Hospital to the United Hospital Fund and to the Greater New York Fund and to their contributors, for the important financial help the Hospital has received from them.

To the Associated Hospital Service I tender the congratulations of the Hospital upon its growth and its contribution to voluntary insurance. I also extend to it the best wishes of the Hospital for its continued growth and ability to educate the community that self-reliance is the path of free men.

Again the Hospital expresses its gratitude to Mayor William O'Dwyer and Comptroller Lazarus Joseph of the City of New York for their consistent efforts on behalf of voluntary hospitals and their success in providing an increased allowance to those hospitals for the care of City-approved patients. It is the Hospital's hope that further increases will be possible, so that the allowance will more nearly approach the cost of providing the necessary care.

A serious problem in every hospital is the avoidance of an attitude on the part of the personnel to regard patients as so many machines needing repair, rather than as human beings in misfortune. Constant association with suffering humanity can beget an insensibility bordering on callousness. I want to express my gratitude to the Hospital's administration, its large staff of doctors and its personnel, for the progress they have made in resisting that grievous tendency and rendering humane services. Dr. Steinberg, aided by his Assistant Directors, has laid particular stress upon this aspect of patient care. I record the expectation that their efforts will continue to the end that patients will increasingly regard Mount Sinai as a kindly, cooperative institution, mindful of and sympathetic to their sufferings and needs.

As a final note, I express my thanks to the committees and members of the Board of Trustees for their financial assistance to the Hospital and for their generosity in time and effort expended toward the successful prosecution of its affairs.

ALFRED L. ROSE, President

THE PROFESSIONAL SERVICES

MEDICAL SERVICES

THE Medical Services traditionally accept responsibility for a considerable part of the Hospital's research work. Research activities in 1949 were conducted with customary vigor and consonant with the high standards the Hospital strives to maintain.

Our interest in diseases of the circulation rests on a tradition of more than half a century, which made it inevitable that an important focus of activity would come into being with the establishment about a year ago of the Cardiovascular Research Group. This organization now includes more than 30 active members, including representation from the Medical, Surgical and Pediatric Services and from laboratory divisions. The admission, diagnosis, treatment and follow-up of patients have been facilitated by the development of new administrative systems. It is expected that the successes of the current year in the treatment of congenital deformities of the heart and great vessels will lead to an expansion of scope and the inclusion of new procedures for the relief of acquired obstructive lesions of the heart. This will mean longer life and increased efficiency for thousands of afflicted persons. As in previous years, many diagnostic facilities now available in coordination for patients with heart disease represent an outgrowth of projects developed under the Research Administrative Committee. Examples of such projects are the work on microplethysmography, cardiac catheterization, blood oxygen determinations, angiocardiology, and researches on respiratory physiology and investigations of renal function.

The Endocrinological Research Group continued its studies on the interrelation of the thyroid and adrenal glands, with special reference to the study of hyperthyroidism. As in previous years, Addison's disease and myasthenia gravis were studied from several new points of view. In collaboration with the Pathology Department, members of the Group used the cock's comb as a test object for the study of hormonal influences on the development of mesodermal tissues.

The Metabolism Group has temporarily closed its wards and is now engaged in statistical study of the large masses of data in its possession.

An interesting study, completed in 1949, concerns hypermetabolic states not caused by hyperthyroidism. It was found that in such conditions the level of protein-bound iodine in the blood and the excretion of radioactive iodine is normal. Other investigations dealt with the production of intestinal ulceration by induced disturbances of homeostasis; the influence of urethane derivatives on anaphylaxis; the excretion of aromatic substances in essential hypertension; the determination of para-aminosalicylic acid in the blood serum; the cultivation of amebae; and the determination of gentisic acid and aureomycin in the blood serum. Methods were developed for the determination of diamidines and for the study of their affinity to special tumors.

Studies are in progress on the clinical and metabolic effects of cortisone, the new synthetic hormone of the adrenal, and of the adrenocorticotrophic hormone of the pituitary on lupus erythematosus, and related diseases of collagen. The relative values of new antibiotics are being determined in a variety of infections.

Other investigations dealt with the following subjects: the anatomic and physiologic factors in disease of the coronary and other arteries, the genetics and pathogenesis of arteriosclerosis, the newer treatments of leukemia and blastomatous diseases, the mechanism of hemolysis, and factors involved in normal and abnormal coagulation of blood.

Two of the most important organizational changes on the medical services during the year were the replacement of the afternoon general medical clinics of the OPD by a diagnostic service for people of low income and a special therapy clinic for the continuing study of ambulant people presenting special problems in therapy. Another significant development was the reorganization of a division of the morning medical clinics under the stimulating direction of an Associate Physician who is making this his primary responsibility.

SURGICAL SERVICES

The Gastric Surgery Group continued its studies of the physiology of the stomach in health and disease. The work involved a survey of the results of vagotomy and of vagotomy combined with gastroenterostomy. In addition, a long-range follow-up was completed in 200 cases of duodenal ulcer treated solely by subtotal gastrectomy. Additional observations were collected on the results of the insulin test in vagotomized persons. A special series of studies dealt with the function of the pancreas in chronic pancreatitis, vagotomy and other conditions. A survey is being conducted to ascertain the long-term results of subtotal gastrectomy in cases of Hodgkin's disease of the stomach.

The Intestinal Surgery Group completed a survey of 163 cases of malignant disease of the rectum and rectosigmoid treated by the operation of anterior resection. The results indicate a high incidence of recurrence and suggest the desirability of giving preference to other surgical approaches. A study of gastric function following esophagectomy was initiated last year and is being continued. One of the Group's most important enterprises is a study of the psychic and other effects of colostomy and ileostomy. This study is a joint effort of the Departments of Psychiatry and Gastroenterology and of the laboratories. Preliminary findings were reported at a meeting in Atlantic City last June. Another study deals with the effect of mediastinal packing in the treatment of portal hypertension.

The Thoracic Surgery Group continued to make clinical observations in cases of roentgenographically demonstrable adenomas of the bronchi, various conditions amenable to treatment by pulmonary decortication, and the criteria of operability in cases of carcinoma of the lung. Other clinical studies dealt with bronchial lipoma, cysts of the diaphragm, cardiac failure resulting from patency of the ductus arteriosus and the indication for lumbar sympathectomy in circulatory disturbances of the lower extremities. A special study inquired into the use of intra-arterial infusions. Another study concerns the growth of experimental aortic grafts in animals. An especially promising study was one that resulted in the development of a mechanical extracorporeal shunt, which may facilitate surgical exploration of the chambers of the heart.

DENTAL AND ORAL SURGERY

The success of the postgraduate course in oral medicine encouraged the Service to present it again and more than 60 new students enrolled this year. Investigations under way include studies in facial growth, preventive orthodontics, and necrosis of the jaws. New methods are being devised for the treatment of cleft palate. These methods will permit the Service to increase its cooperation with the Department of Health and the Department of Education, which share responsibility for children afflicted with this condition.

DERMATOLOGY

During the year the service devoted much of its attention to the development of work in mycology. The result was an increase in the training of the medical and technical staff, and a great improvement in the facilities available to in-patients and to out-patients. At the same time it was possible to afford improved training to the House Staff.

A series of methods has been developed for the objective evaluation of fungicides. It has been shown that crude penicillin contains a fungistatic substance that has therapeutic possibilities. Studies on absorption of antihistaminic drugs through the skin are continuing and have been fortified by the aid of a research grant. Studies on sensitization to various antibiotics are approaching completion.

ELECTROCARDIOGRAPHY

The personnel of the Department was the largest in its history. In addition to three adjunct physicians, a research associate and five research assistants, there were in 1949 nine residents (post-graduate students) and a number of official observers who spent several months with us. These men came from near and far, including India, China, Israel, Greece, Turkey, Argentina and other South American countries.

The routine work of the department included forty-five to fifty electrocardiograms daily, heart sounds, venous pulse tracings, two-step electrocardiograms and anoxemia tests.

The Department conducts many post-graduate courses in addition to regularly scheduled ward rounds and electrocardiographic and inter-departmental conferences.

The following are the more important research projects now in process:

The Two-Step Exercise Electrocardiogram for the Evaluation of Coronary Circulation.

Acute Coronary Insufficiency: The Mechanism and Pathogenesis of the Myocardial Lesions; Electrocardiographic Findings; Clinical Aspects.

Ventricular Aneurysm.

Study of Circumferential Chest Leads.

Treatment of Paroxysmal Tachycardia.

Comparison between Two-Step and ten per cent Anoxemia Test.

GYNECOLOGY

Increasing availability of the newer antibiotics and the improvement in methods of preoperative and postoperative care have widened the scope of surgical treatment for elderly patients and have greatly enlarged the output of therapeutic work. Advances were made in the treatment of fistulae. These lesions are notoriously persistent but are now yielding to newer methods, especially with drugs available to control the flora of the gastro-intestinal tract. Another development was the growing reliance upon total hysterectomy, which appears to be superseding the supravaginal operation. Progress was achieved also in the use of tantalum implants for the treatment of stress incontinence. In the routine work of gynecological diagnosis, hysterosalpingography has won its way to complete acceptance and is now used as a routine. The study of vaginal cytology by the Papanicolaou method is being used increasingly.

NEUROLOGY

The Service continued to be active clinically and in research, investigations having been conducted chiefly along physiological and anatomic lines. The list of subjects studied includes investigations of sensory functions, studies of head trauma, work on arteriography in vascular diseases and an investigation of emotional stresses in multiple sclerosis. An investigation of the integration of motor patterns was completed.

OPHTHALMOLOGY

The Service had a full program of educational and investigative activities. The latter included studies of surgical technique and of the use of propionates in ocular infection, and investigations of corneal lesions associated with lichen planus, dark adaptation and of electrocoagulation. One promising series of studies dealt with the capillary structure of the retina in generalized vascular disease. This investigation continues the tradition of intense interest in general and local vascular disease. A member of the service was awarded the Silver Medal of the American Medical Association for an exhibit on the pathology of the eye in old age.

ORTHOPEDICS

Formal medical affiliation of the Orthopedic Service with the Blythedale Home was effected last year and the liaison is already proving beneficial to both institutions. Blythedale provides 60 orthopedic beds for children requiring long-term treatment. These facilities make it possible to free beds at Mount Sinai for patients with acute illnesses. Also, because Blythedale is under the medical supervision of our orthopedic staff, our residents benefit by the study of orthopedic ailments not seen in so-called acute hospitals. Funds have been obtained for construction work in the patio near Ward X. This area will provide four additional children's beds for acute orthopedic illnesses. Members of the department carried out research on experimental scoliosis, osteogenesis, bone grafting and vertebral development.

THE NEW ROSENSTIEL LABORATORY FOR THE PEDIATRIC DEPARTMENT

OTOLARYNGOLOGY

In addition to its usual routine clinical activities, the Otolaryngological Service engaged in a series of investigations. One set of studies concerned the operative treatment of Meniere's syndrome, the surgical anatomy of the ear in relation to fenestration, and the use of the chorda tympani in operative procedures. Progress was made in analysis of the factors involved in speech hearing tests. Another series of investigations dealt with aspects of infection, such as treatment of rhinoscleroma and the influence of hyaluronidase on the action of penicillin. The technique of rhinoplasty has been under continuous surveillance. A special study of the psychologic aspects of plastic operations on the nose has yielded extremely interesting results.

PEDIATRICS

Dr. Murray Bass, after many years of distinguished service, reached retirement age and resigned as Pediatrician to the Hospital. Dr. Bass has long been admired for his ability and his friendliness. It is hoped that he will continue to aid the service by his advice and guidance. Dr. Horace L. Hodes, formerly Associate Professor of Pediatrics at the Johns Hopkins School of Medicine, was appointed Pediatrician on a full-time basis.

During the year members of the Service joined a hospital group organized to study congenital heart disease. The group also includes members of the Departments of Surgery and Medicine and representatives of the electrocardiographic laboratories. Admissions of ambulatory patients with congenital heart disease, whether children or adults, are channeled through a Congenital Heart Disease Clinic, which meets in the Children's Out-Patient Building. The routine of admission and diagnostic study has now been brought to a high level of efficiency and increasing numbers of patients have visited the Clinic.

The teaching of undergraduate medical students continued. Students from the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Columbia University elect to take the pediatrics course which is based on a full-time daily schedule for a period of two months at this Hospital. In addition, two forty-hour courses were given for postgraduate students.

With funds of the Dorothy H. and Lewis Rosenstiel Foundation, a new and well-equipped research laboratory was erected on the roof of the Children's Out-Patient Building. This laboratory will be used for research in virology, bacteriology, chemistry and immunology, with particular emphasis on problems relating to diseases of infants and children.

PHYSICAL MEDICINE

The Department continued to cooperate closely with services referring patients to it, especially the Neurological and the Orthopedic Services. With the great development of antibiotic drugs, the need for fever therapy has diminished greatly, making it possible for the Department to turn its attention and resources increasingly toward the use of physical measures of rehabilitation. The recent epidemic of poliomyelitis necessitated the employment of additional technical personnel and caused the Hospital to be more active as an agency for the care of persons afflicted with this disease. Clinical and investigative work dealt with electromyographic kinesiography, the treatment of Bell's palsy and the physiology of the peripheral circulation.

PSYCHIATRY

The Psychiatric Service in 1949 continued to develop and strengthen its organization. This was true especially of the Child Psychiatry Division. In this expanded division there are now five active clinics, to which thirty psychiatrists are allocated. In addition to the two Parent-Child Guidance Clinics, there is a special follow-up clinic for psychosomatic problems and a new Adolescent Clinic. The Ward Liaison Psychiatry Clinic continued to perform liaison in the indoor Pediatric Service. There is an out-patient liaison group working effectively with special out-patient pediatric clinics.

The Psychiatric Ward has accepted for treatment patients with a wide variety of illnesses such as ulcerative colitis, intractable asthma, peptic ulcer and neurodermatitis. Usually, these patients have had severe physical illnesses in addition to important psychological and emotional difficulties. The ward has been staffed by an Associate Psychiatrist and by two internists who alternate in supervising the medical management of the patients. An Associate Psychiatrist has been placed in charge of the important Liaison Service, which is fully integrated with the work of the Hospital. In the first ten months, this group conducted 518 formal consultations. The four adult out-patient clinics, each of which functions two half-days per week, received more than 6000 visits. It is obvious that these extensive activities, in addition to those of the seven social workers, require a large staff. There are at present seventy psychiatrists attached to the Psychiatric Service.

A number of research projects were conducted during the year. Many of these took the form of collaborative enterprises involving members of other clinical services. Of special interest are the studies of ulcerative colitis, including particularly the results of various types of treatment, and a study of the psychologic factors involved in rhinoplasty. The Psychiatric Service has benefited greatly from collaboration with other services and endeavors to return equal benefits to them.

RADIOLOGY

In March 1949 Dr. Marcy Sussman resigned as chief of the department, bringing to an end a term of office characterized by brilliant and energetic leadership and by much achievement in investigative fields. Dr. Bernard S. Wolf assumed the responsibilities of chief in October 1949. The activities of the department continued to expand much beyond the proper capacity of the already crowded facilities. In addition to doing its routine, the department serves as a home for many of the activities of the Cardiovascular Research Group, which requires the use of facilities afforded by the department. Close cooperation with the clinical and laboratory departments of the Hospital was continued.

RADIOTHERAPY

During 1949 the department, in addition to handling the routine treatment of patients requiring radiotherapy, conducted a series of investigations, most of which were developed in association with members of the Physics Department. These studies dealt with dosimetry, the localization and use of radioactive isotopes and the development of applicators for special purposes.

UROLOGY

The Service's principal investigative activity dealt with research on the management of acute renal insufficiency. A new artificial kidney, smaller and more efficient than previous models, was completed and is now being subjected to preliminary tests. Other studies dealt with the technique of various urological operations and studies of renal clearance under special conditions.

MEDICAL EDUCATION

That the high standards of medical education here are generally recognized is demonstrated by the large number of young physicians from all over the United States who continue to apply for positions on the House Staff. In 1949, 262 applications were received for 24 positions as interns.

All applicants were carefully screened and a selected fraction of them were interviewed. The interns ultimately appointed came from the following schools:

Boston U. ....	3	Jefferson .....	2
U. Chicago .....	1	N. Y. Med College.....	2
Columbia .....	6	New York U. ....	4
Cornell .....	1	U. Pennsylvania .....	1
Harvard .....	1	U. Rochester .....	1
Syracuse U. ....	2

During the year the residencies in surgery and surgical specialties were reorganized to conform to the changed requirements of the Board of General Surgery and of the American College of Surgery. As a result, the Hospital will now offer: a four-year residency in general surgery; a three-year residency in urological surgery; a three-year residency in gynecology; a three-year residency in orthopedic surgery; a three-year residency in ear, nose and throat diseases; and a three-year residency in ophthalmology.

Residents in otolaryngology and in ophthalmology will serve the first year of their residency outside the Hospital. During that year they will follow a graduate course in their specialty in one of the medical schools.

The reorganization made it necessary to increase the number of residents in gynecology to five and in urological surgery to three. In addition, three new residencies in pathology and one new assistant residency in pediatrics were created. The number of assistant residents and residents who receive board, lodging and monthly stipend from the Hospital was increased to 77. The number of physicians who worked as fulltime postgraduate students in the Hospital for periods of six months and one year varied in the course of the year between 30 and 35. Several members of the Senior House Staff and several postgraduate students came from abroad (Brazil, Canada, China, Colombia, South Africa and Turkey).

Conferences, lectures and other educational functions were continued. The following is a list of lectures given by distinguished visitors in the Blumenthal Auditorium:

- DR. JOHN H. LAWRENCE, Director, Donner Laboratory of Medical Physics, University of California, Berkeley, delivered two William Henry Welch Lectures on "Tracer Studies with Artificial Radioactivity" and "Therapeutic Studies with Artificial Radioactivity."
- DR. EMANUEL B. SCHOENBACH, Physician to The Johns Hopkins Hospital and Associate Professor of Preventive Medicine and Assistant Professor in Medicine, The Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine, delivered the Edward Gamaliel Janeway Lecture on "The Newer Antibiotics; Polymyxin, Chloromycetin and Aureomycin." (Dr. Schoenbach is an alumnus of The Mount Sinai Hospital.)
- DR. HANS SELYE, M.D., Ph.D. (Prague), D.Sc. (McGill), F.R.S. (Canada); Professor and Director of The Institute of Experimental Medicine and Surgery of The University of Montreal, delivered the Isidore Friesner Lecture on "Hypertension as a Disease of Adaptation."
- DR. SELMAN A. WAKSMAN, M.D., Ph.D., D.Sc., LL.D., Professor of Microbiology at Rutgers University and Microbiologist at the New Jersey Agricultural Experiment Station, delivered the Bela Schick Lecture on "Searching for New Chemotherapeutic Agents."

The 1949 series of Wednesday evening lectures on "Recent Advances in Pathology and Bacteriology" and on "Recent Advances in Disorders of Metabolism" included the following:

- DR. PAUL R. CANNON, Chairman, Department of Pathology, University of Chicago, Chicago, Illinois, spoke on "Some Changing Aspects of Protein Metabolism."
- DR. SERGEI FEITELBERG, Physicist to the Hospital, spoke on "Physical Methods in the Study of Pathology."

- DR. TRACY B. MALLORY, Professor of Pathology and Chairman of the Department of Pathology, Harvard Medical School, spoke on "Systemic Pathology Consequent to Traumatic Shock."
- DR. HARRY EAGLE, Scientific Director, Research Branch, National Cancer Institute, Bethesda, Maryland, spoke on "The Mode of Action of Penicillin in Relation to Its Therapeutic Use."
- DR. B. BLACK-SCHAEFFER, Assistant Professor of Pathology, Duke University, Durham, North Carolina, spoke on "The Clinical Implications of the Shwartzman Phenomenon."
- DR. JOSEPH H. GLOBUS, Neuropathologist, Consulting Neurologist, Assistant Clinical Professor of Neurology in Columbia University, spoke on "The Morphology of Brain Tumors in Relation to Prognosis."

DR. S. J. THANNHAUSER, Professor of Clinical Medicine, Tufts Medical School; Associate Physician-in-Chief, Pratt Diagnostic Hospital, Boston, spoke on "Xanthomatoses."

As in previous years, the Hospital participated in the Annual Graduate Fortnight on "Advances in Diagnostic Methods" of the New York Academy of Medicine, in the Atlantic City Meeting of the American Medical Association, in the annual session of the New York State Medical Society and many other conventions. Several members of the staff delivered lectures and contributed to the scientific exhibits.

The Women's Medical Society of New York State held its mid-year meeting at the Hospital January 29, 1949. Also, the Chaplaincy Institute of the New York Board of Rabbis held a seminar on psychosomatic medicine at the Hospital and The American College of Physicians met here on March 29-31, 1949.

Shortly after his return from a visit in Israel, Dr. Israel S. Wechsler, Attending Neurologist and Clinical Professor of Neurology at Columbia University, gave a talk here on "Medicine in Israel."

The monthly Seminar on the History of Medicine was continued. The Department of Chemistry conducted a monthly seminar at which well known scientists reported about progress in their specialty field.

Regular teaching of third-year undergraduate students of Columbia University in the Pediatrics Service was continued. In addition, during the three summer months six fourth-year medical students were permitted to work as acting interns on the medical wards.

The development of the Jacobi Library was considerably facilitated by two new funds for the purchase of new books—the I. C. Rubin Library Fund and the Murray Bass Library Fund. A special fund of $1,000 was donated by Mrs. Florence Mendelsohn for books and journals on growth.

During the academic year 1948-1949, postgraduate courses in the various branches of medicine attracted 334 students, 197 of whom were veterans. They were from 18 states and 14 foreign countries.

MEDICAL RESEARCH

Most staff members of the Hospital have long been convinced that the quality and adequacy of routine clinical work is significantly influenced by their active participation in scientific research. Much of their time, effort and interest have therefore been devoted during the past year to research, both clinical and fundamental.

A notable feature of these activities in 1949 was the integration of staff members with similar or related training and technical skills into research groups devoted to clinical and laboratory investigations in endocrinology, cardiovascular physiology, hematological physiology, gastroenterology, immunology, biochemistry, biophysics and chemotherapy. As these groups continue to develop, they will account for much of the clinical research activities of the Hospital and will provide opportunity for men possessing various types of skill and special knowledge. Some of the most interesting of the many conferences and discussion groups held at the Hospital were presented by these research units.

Of the hundred or more research projects which were in progress during 1949, space permits mention of only a few. An elaborate investigation has dealt with monomolecular films of fatty acids. This work involves important theoretic considerations and has had, in addition, a practical result; namely, the creation of a number of new fatty acids possessing special properties.

In the field of neurology factors associated with the production of hemorrhages in the brain are under investigation. An important long-term project conducted in the gastroenterology laboratories has been concerned with the factors responsible for cancer of the stomach. This project involves the use of physiological, chemical, and histological techniques.

Several members of the staff with special experience in physical chemistry have been engaged in an effort to analyze ragweed pollen in order to ascertain which components cause symptoms of hay fever in allergic persons. Large quantities of the yellow pollen are being subjected to elaborate analytical processes designed to isolate chemical fractions. Each chemical fraction will then be identified and tested.

Another interesting investigation concerns the use of the advanced techniques of modern physics. In this project, x-ray diffraction is employed in an effort to ascertain which disease conditions are associated with specific alterations in the molecular patterns of tissues.

It has been known for decades that certain diseases of the circulatory system produce alterations in the contour of the pulse wave. By means of a sensitive microplethysmograph designed and constructed by the physics department, it has been possible to obtain delicate tracings which describe even minute changes in the capillary pulse waves at the periphery of the body. A long series of patients has been studied, and it has been found that certain structural alterations in the circulatory apparatus produce capillary pulse waves sufficiently constant and distinctive to be of diagnostic significance. Some of these abnormal conditions are now correctible by surgical methods.

Another especially promising development also concerns the field of cardiology. Recent advances in therapeutic surgery make it probable that within a few years surgeons will be operating on the interior of the heart. This at once raises the question of the mechanical difficulties which would be produced by the presence of blood in the chambers of the heart during a surgical procedure. To obviate this difficulty, a member of the surgical and research staff has devised an apparatus which is in effect a mechanical heart. This ingenious device receives blood which is destined to enter the heart and by-passes it around that organ. Thus the heart itself remains empty or nearly empty for prolonged periods. This apparatus has worked successfully in experimentation but is not yet ready for application to human beings.

The newest of all therapeutic methods, the use of cortisone and ACTH (pituitary adrenocorticotrophic hormone) in the treatment of diseases affecting the connective tissues and blood vessels of the body (the so-called diseases of collagen), is under study by a team of clinical and laboratory investigators. This Hospital has been recognized for more than twenty years as a center of research on the diseases of collagen; for this reason, it has been recently designated as one of the institutions which will evaluate the therapeutic value and the hazards involved in the use of these potent hormones. With the help of generous grants from the New York Foundation and the U. S. Public Health Service for the purchase of cortisone and ACTH, intensive biochemical as well as clinical studies are in progress which are revealing new information of extraordinary importance.

The general research funds of the Hospital are far from adequate to meet even our most urgent needs. Fortunately, the Hospital's position in the field of medical research is being recognized increasingly, so that during 1949, a number of grants-in-aid were received from philanthropic and public foundations.

THE OUT-PATIENT DEPARTMENT

THIS report covering the activities of the Out-Patient Department for the past year presents, in addition to pertinent data, an appraisal of our attempt to care for the needs of the ambulant patients unable to afford the services of the private physician.

The New York "Times" recently carried an article quoting the Commissioner of Hospitals describing in critical terms the work of the great majority of the city's out-patient clinics. In an objective appraisal of the work being done at Mount Sinai, I feel we are justified in believing that we are among the exceptions. This is stated with no feeling of complacency. We realize how difficult it is to care for the needs of thousands of patients through the services of a staff of doctors working entirely as volunteers while attending to private practices. Our physical facilities are also less adequate than a new, modern out-patient building would be. In spite of these difficulties, our constant effort to expand and improve our services has, I believe, met with a fair measure of success.

In 1949, the OPD's seventy-sixth year, care was given to 21,863 patients, whose total visits numbered 276,457. This figure is almost identical with that of last year. There had been a steady decline in census during years of full employment, but in the recent past this trend has slowly been reversing itself. This group was treated by 550 physicians and dentists working in eighty-five clinics. This staff is assisted by a large group of nurses, social workers, volunteers and other ancillary personnel—all interested in helping to solve the physical as well as the personal problems of patients.

We continue to contribute more of our funds towards the cost of each patient-visit than any other major hospital in the City. The percentage of free visits (62 per cent) continues at almost the same level as in former years. Most patients who receive free treatment are also given the necessary medication entirely without cost.

Our psychiatric service continues to expand. An Adolescent Clinic was established in an endeavor to meet an acute community need and the psychiatric service was further enlarged by the establishment of two Psychosomatic Clinics.

A major development was the "coming of age" of our Congenital Cardiac Clinic, a special therapy clinic which has now established itself as a diagnostic center for that disease. The Hospital is being recognized as a center for cardiac surgery. Facilities have been developed for the reception, diagnosis, and treatment of all patients—private as well as clinic—with congenital cardiac disease or other major cardio-vascular ailments which lend themselves to surgical procedure. Many patients are referred from out of the state for this highly specialized service.

We have recently assigned various specialists to one of our two medical clinics where they are immediately available to assist in the diagnosis of special cases. This newly established procedure often relieves the patient of the necessity of being referred to another clinic for treatment. We are confident that this is a forward-looking step and, after a further period of testing, we plan to introduce a similar practice in the other medical clinic.

The Pediatric Clinic is being reorganized under the recently appointed Pediatrician to the Hospital. Many children who formerly crowded the Emergency Room are now seen in the Pediatric OPD, where an assistant resident screens them. Many of them need no further hospital care; others are referred to the clinic for treatment.

Some administrative changes contributed to the improvement of medical standards; namely, a new format for the clinic chart, making for greater neatness and intelligibility; a new laboratory and X-ray report sheet, assuring that reports are readily determined; and a revised face sheet, allowing more space for listing of diagnoses and clinics attended.

During the year several facilities were added; namely, three more rooms to be devoted to child psychiatry; adequate dressing facilities in the X-ray Department; an additional electrocardiograph, with a full-time E.C.G. technician assigned to OPD; and the Emergency Room was refurnished.

A large expansion program for the Dental Department was started which when completed will almost double facilities. This will enable us to expand the much needed services of our Orthodontia Clinic, as well as other dental specialties which have been restricted through lack of space.

In response to a request by Federation we allocated space in the OPD for the out-patient activities of the Hillside Hospital.

The OPD continues to serve as a medium for medical education. Some residents, by working in clinics, are able to receive credit towards American Board certification, which testifies to the quality of work being done in these departments. A postgraduate educational program carried on at the Hospital in conjunction with Columbia University employs the OPD as a source of material. Although there are no research laboratories directly available to OPD the large number of patients affords an opportunity for original investigative work and many projects of that nature were carried on in the past year.

We believe that 1949 was a year of progress in caring for the indigent ambulatory sick who come to our doors for treatment. Whatever good results were achieved were due to the conscientious and cooperative efforts of the administration, the many doctors, nurses, social workers, volunteer aides and lay employees, who worked so unselfishly. To all of them I extend my very sincere thanks.

THE LABORATORIES

BACTERIOLOGY

THERE was in 1949 an increase of approximately ten per cent in the number of examinations performed, which may in part be explained by the introduction of new diagnostic procedures in some subdivisions of the Routine Bacteriological Laboratories.

The Serology Laboratory made the Mazzini test for the diagnosis of syphilis available for use particularly when other diagnostic tests yield equivocal results.

The Chemotherapy unit carried out a large number of bacterial sensitivity and blood level determinations of penicillin, streptomycin, sulphonamides and the newer antibiotics such as aureomycin, chloromycetin, bacitracin and polymyxin. The initial difficulties of determining aureomycin blood levels were overcome by the introduction of the Room Temperature Test recently published by a member of the Department.

The Routine Bacteriology Laboratory studied the bactericidal properties of hexachlorophene and phisoderm and, finding the compounds to be highly efficient, recommended their use in operating rooms and wards.

The physician in the Parasitological Laboratory carried out a large number of microscopic and cultural studies on ova and parasites, and met the increased demands for skin tests in a variety of parasitic diseases and microscopic examinations of rectal biopsies.

The staff of the Virology Laboratory used the serological diagnostic tests for mumps, St. Louis encephalitis, Eastern equine encephalitis, Lymphocytic choriomeningitis, Lymphopathia venereum, Q fever, typhus, Rocky Mountain spotted fever, Rickettsial pox and herpes. Attempts were made to isolate viruses in materials from twenty patients, using chick embryos, Swiss mice and rabbits.

In the Nose and Throat Bacteriology Clinic studies were continued on a number of cases, employing detailed bacteriological and cytological methods, which provided valuable diagnostic information to both the Out-Patient Clinics and the Hospital Ward services. These studies were recently extended to the Department of Pediatrics.

The Department of Bacteriology participated in the Graduate Fortnight of the New York Academy of Medicine. The Bacteriologist gave an evening lecture on the Diagnosis of Bacterial Diseases. An exhibit dealing with diagnostic methods employed in the department was arranged and the following topics were featured: Clinical Bacteriology and Serology, Parasitic Diseases, Allergic Diseases, Diseases of the Nose and Sinuses, and Virus Diseases.

The Department's research studies showed satisfactory progress. A simplified method was devised for the electrophoretic isolation of high concentrations of the colorless component in giant and dwarf ragweed extracts. It is believed this may aid in chemical identification of antigenic components responsible for ragweed hay fever and asthma. The administration of aerosols and the study of lung permeability was advanced by the development of an instrument for measuring the inspiration time.

Investigations were completed on the agglutination of human erythrocytes modified by treatment with Newcastle disease and influenza virus; and those dealing with specific serological reactions which follow naturally acquired mumps. Furthermore, a series of observations has been made in order to evaluate the mumps skin test in pediatric practice. A study is now being conducted on the absorption of mumps virus by chicken and human erythrocytes and its relation to hemagglutination and other properties. Serological reactions of patients with so-called "non-paralytic poliomyelitis" are being studied, using serial specimens of sera from children admitted to the Hospital last August and September.

In view of the disappointing clinical results in antibiotic therapy of some cases of prostatic infections, experiments were conducted to determine the penetration of penicillin into the prostate following parenteral administration of usual clinical doses. The concentration of the drug was found to be less than one unit per gm. of prostatic tissue. The indications are that this concentration is insufficient except for very sensitive infecting organisms. Studies are in progress to determine optimal doses necessary for treatment of infections with organisms resistant to penicillin.

A method was developed for determining the concentration of pyribenzamine and other antihistaminics in biological fluids. The method was applied to a study of the absorption of pyribenzamine through the skin following the application of the drug in the form of an ointment. Work was continued on the fractionation of ragweed extracts. Quantitative studies on the rate of destruction of ragweed antigen by means of proteolytic enzymes and oxidizing agents are nearing completion. In addition, information was accumulated on the quantitative variations in the antigenic components of ragweed pollen collected from regions of the U. S.

Investigations on various problems of Chemotherapy were continued. An assay procedure for determining aureomycin concentration in the blood was reported. Correlation was obtained between known concentrations and blood levels in patients treated with the drug. As previously noted, the method found useful application in the routine work of the Chemotherapeutic unit. It was found also that the addition of hyaluronidase to penicillin instilled into the normal and diseased paranasal antrum resulted in a significant concentration of penicillin in the blood. It was postulated that the increased blood penicillin levels following hyaluronidase were due to greater diffusion and penetration of penicillin as a result of the spreading action of hyaluronidase. The investigators are now studying the effect of hyaluronidase on the absorption and penetration of antibiotics from various sites and the clinical value of the enhanced penetration made possible by hyaluronidase. Studies were completed on the comparative value of long moderate dose therapy versus intensive short therapy with penicillin and caronamide in subacute bacterial endocarditis. The superiority of the long treatment over the short was indicated.

Work by members of the staff corroborated the observations of Kitchen, Thomas and Rein on the production of a constant plasma penicillin level by means of daily injections of procain penicillin in oil with aluminum monostearate.

The growth of Endameba histolytica in vitro using a quantitative technique for determining daily fluctuations in ameba populations was investigated. The effect of the following drugs on ameba cultures was then evaluated: emetine, aureomycin, bacitracin, polymyxin, streptomycin and penicillin G. On the basis of these investigations, six cases of amebiasis, including one case of acute amebic colitis, were successfully treated with aureomycin. Employing the same quantitative technique, the effects of various amounts of rice powder on ameba cultures were determined. The studies provided useful information leading to improvement in the cultivation techniques. Preliminary studies were also conducted on the relation of lysozyme to amebic growth in vitro. It was observed that the growth of amebae was attended by lysozyme production. The mechanism of this response is under investigation.

Research on irradiated vitamin B<sub>6</sub> (pyridoxamine) was continued with the support of the Commonwealth Fund. The yield and the antibiotic activity of irradiated pyridoxamine were considerably increased by the development of suitable experimental conditions. The results may represent a new and interesting pathway of conversion of vitamins into antivitamins, serving to antagonize and regulate the utilization of the vitamins by the animal cell.

Observations were made of the relation between nutrition to resistance and between susceptibility to infectious diseases in the hamster. These point to certain relationships between vitamin requirements and susceptibility of the hamster to poliomyelitis virus.

The mechanism of the biological action of quinoline derivatives was studied as to their toxicity for a variety of unicellular and multicellular structures and their therapeutic effect on malaria (i.e. quinine, atabrine and newer anti-malarial drugs). Efforts in this direction are aimed at wider therapeutic applications of quinolines. The observation was made that the toxic effect of quinoline upon bacterial cells could be completely reversed by addition of a compound formed by heating an aminoacid with a monosaccharide at a suitable pH.

A study was conducted to determine the effect of ACTH upon the Schwartzman phenomenon. The experiments demonstrated that the adrenocorticotrophic hormone is capable of completely inhibiting the hemorrhagic necrosis characteristic of the phenomenon. The study may afford a new experimental approach for the elucidation of the beneficial therapeutic effect of the adrenocorticotrophic hormone and may provide a useful method for bioassaying of the hormone.

PATHOLOGY

A total of 7,757 specimens removed at operations were examined and 336 autopsies performed. The latter included 128 examinations of the cerebrospinal system performed by the Neuro-Pathologic Laboratory.

A new division was organized for diagnostic procedures in desquamative cytology (Papanicolaou Test). Tests were performed including vaginal smears, aspirations from bronchoscopies, sputa, urines and prostatic secretions. The tests were of definite value in the diagnosis of malignant neoplasms of the female genital tract and of the lungs.

Teaching of anatomic pathology continued to be one of the Department's major activities. Fifteen trainees were engaged in full-time work, assisting in the performance of autopsies and in the examination of surgical material. Special training in neuropathology was also offered. The trainees worked under the supervision of senior members of the Department and were given the opportunity to study all available material. Understanding of the problems of disease was stimulated by individual discussions at weekly (Saturday) conferences and by monthly journal club meetings attended by all Department members. This training program seems to have attracted national attention because applications were received from all over the U. S. An increasing number of applicants have to be refused every year for lack of space. Priority is accorded members of the Hospital's House Staff.

The weekly clinical-pathologic conferences conducted in cooperation with Attending Physicians were attended by the profession of the Metropolitan area in the same numbers as in past decades. The biweekly clinical-pathologic conferences conducted by Drs. Otani and Snapper exclusively for the members of the House Staff were fully attended and again proved of great educational value. Weekly demonstrations of neuropathologic material were given by Dr. Globus. Three mornings a week current surgical-pathologic material was demonstrated to the House Staff.

The Department continued to participate in the Hospital's post-graduate teaching program given in association with Columbia University. A 30-hour course in general pathology was given to 20 enrolled students. The 30-hour course in surgical pathology, limited to 12 students, was oversubscribed and applicants who could not be accommodated were enrolled for the year 1950. Ten additional hours of instruction in the pathologic anatomy of selected topics were offered as part of the seminar given by the Department of Medicine. The Neuro-Pathology Department gave eight students an 80-hour course in practical Neuro-Anatomy and Neuro-Pathology.

Through cytochemical analysis of certain microscopic lesions of acute lupus erythematosus the conclusion was reached that one of the factors of the morbid process in this puzzling malady is a disturbance of nucleic acid metabolism of cells of mesenchymal origin. This investigative work was done by the Department in collaboration with members of the Department of Zoology of Columbia University and was reported at the Annual Meeting of the American Association of Pathologists and Bacteriologists April 14, 1949.

An apparatus for photometric studies of cells and tissues was purchased with the financial aid of the Daisy Levy Foundation. Prof. A. W. Pollister, of Columbia University's Department of Zoology, generously gave guidance and instruction in the methods of cytochemical investigations. The technique has now been established and is being used in the exploration of other problems. The U. S. Public Health Service has granted Dr. J. Dyckman a post-doctorate fellowship for the year 1950 to pursue such cytochemical investigations in carcinoma of the colon.

Investigations were completed of a group of fatal cases of allergic granulomatosis, characterized by vascular alterations of the type of classical polyarteritis nodosa accompanied by prominent lesions in the extravascular connective tissue. The findings were reported at the annual meeting of the American Association of Pathologists and Bacteriologists.

As part of an extensive research program in the biology of connective tissue studies of the hormonal control of the intercellular substance of the collagenous tissue were finished. It was shown that testosterone promotes and estrogen inhibits the deposition of mucopolysaccharides in the comb of the new-born chick. These findings were reported at a meeting of the New York Pathologic Society. These investigations and others still in progress were carried out jointly with the Endocrine staff and are supported by a grant of the Life Insurance Medical Research fund.

There was a study of the effect of peripherally active sympatholytic drugs such as ergotamine tartrate on the homeostatic mechanism concerned with the injection of dysentery toxins. The development of gastrointestinal lesions, regularly produced by such toxins, could be arrested by the application of the drug prior to injection of the toxin. An identical effect was produced by the application of etamon chloride which blocks the stimulation of the vasoconstrictor nerves at the level of the ganglion. These investigations are supported by a grant of the U. S. Public Health Service.

The Neuropathologist and his assistants conducted an investigation based on unusual observations at the autopsy table. The results of these investigations were published during the year. Among these publications was a report of a case of diffuse encephalopathy following prophylactic pertussis vaccine. The observation was published in the Journal of the A.M.A. and has attracted a good deal of attention. Other reports dealt with the microscopic analysis of rare cerebral neoplasms, with unusual infections of the meninges and the brain, with the effect of blood dyscrasias on the cerebrospinal system and the relation of the morphology of brain tumors to prognosis. Experiments are now being evaluated to clarify the pathogenesis of massive spontaneous cerebral hemorrhage. New techniques have been employed to observe the retinal vessels and hitherto unknown lesions of the arterioles and capillaries in essential hypertension, especially of the malignant type, have been discovered.

The experimental study by the Division of Bone Pathology was expanded to include a broader investigation of the histochemistry of osteogenesis. Phosphatase was demonstrated mainly in pre-osseous tissue, suggesting a closer relationship of phosphatase to matrix elaboration than to calcification. The factors in autogenous, homogenous and heterogenous grafts that encourage and inhibit osteogenesis were studied.

As in previous years, members of the Department delivered outside lectures at the invitation of a number of medical institutions, including the University of Maryland Medical College, the American Neurological Association, the International Congress of Rheumatic Diseases and Duke University.

CHEMISTRY

The 1949 operations of the Chemistry Department were less dramatic than in recent years, but progress was substantial. The annual statistics, to be found in another section of this report, bear witness to the increasing quantity of routine services rendered by the Department. The quality of routine production was improved in several respects, in particular through the cooperation of the Administration in regard to accelerated transmission of specimens, and other safeguards in matters of procedure. One technician has been specially trained in the routine determination of pancreatic enzymes. Problems of expansion of routine service are under study; the continuous accrual of chemical aids to diagnosis and therapy and the demands of the projected Maternity Service will be taken into account.

The new water-soluble, heat-stable drugs, derived from adrenochrome, which were developed in our laboratory, were further investigated. The test of their clinical usefulness against high blood pressure in man was preceded by the necessary toxicity tests in animals. Substances of this type were also found to shorten the bleeding time when administered in minute quantities. Tests on 100 patients, carried out in collaboration with Dr. Sylvan Moolten at St. Peter's Hospital, New Brunswick, demonstrated the usefulness of the new compound in shortening the bleeding time immediately following such surgical procedures as tonsillectomy and prostatectomy.

Studies of vitamin A led to the synthesis of that half of the vitamin molecule, referred to as the "side-chain." The separate preparation of individual parts of a vitamin molecule is designed to permit the localization of the typical vitamin action and the preparation of anti-vitamins required for the study of vitamin mechanism.

Research on branched fatty acids yielded a new homologous series designated as "thysanoid" or tasseled fatty acids. The accuracy of this formulation was unequivocally confirmed by infrared absorption spectra, carried out at the Research Laboratories of Armour and Company. These novel compounds are now available for studies of fat digestion and metabolism. The microanalyses of fatty acids such as are found in skin excretions were further advanced by the use of so-called frontal adsorption analysis.

The research project carried out at Hopkins Marine Station led to fundamental results for the problem of adaptation of microbes to high temperatures. Fifty new strains of thermophilic bacteria were isolated, and it was possible to adapt, at will, a number of known bacteria, living at normal temperatures, to temperatures as high as 70° Centigrade. The behavior of thermophilic bacteria under various conditions of food supply has engendered the concept of the "Dynamic Nature of Thermophily": adaptability is a function of active metabolism.

The colorimetric method for the quantitative measurement of antihistaminics in body fluids, developed in another Department of our Laboratories, was applied to the study of absorption of these compounds through normal and abnormal skin. The electrophoretic analysis of protein patterns continued to develop into a diagnostic tool of pathognomonic significance in such diseases as lupus erythematosus and multiple myeloma. The physical separation by this method now permits the correlation of unusual chemical findings with individual protein fractions in the blood serum and becomes a vital link in the search for the causes of disease. Such studies are under way in the case of lupus erythematosus and in thyroid disease, where they are correlated with the use of radioactive iodine as a means for the detection of iodine containing protein fractions. The study of the level of protein-bound iodine and of the excretion of radioactive iodine permits a differentiation between Grave's disease and cases of increased metabolic rate not due to hyperthyroidism.

Other research of clinical import included work in renal physiology with clearance tests designed to differentiate among impairments of glomerular filtration, renal blood flow and tubular function. These studies were correlated with experimental investigations of the effects upon kidney function of mercurial diuretics and other drugs and poisons.

The effect of secretin on the quantity and quality of the pancreatic flow, its content of amylase and of bicarbonate, was studied under a variety of conditions. From these observations was developed a pancreas function test that is now offered as a routine diagnostic test.

Studies on hypercholesterolemia were continued on a genetic basis. A hereditary disturbance of cholesterol metabolism, manifested by elevated serum cholesterol content, appears to be a common factor in coronary atherosclerosis and in familial xanthomatosis. Many patients with uncomplicated coronary sclerosis represent a milder form of disturbed lipid metabolism, due to a minor genetic abnormality, but which contributes to the occurrence of coronary disease in young persons.

Additional research grants, received late in 1949, will support three new projects in the field of Clinical Chemistry.

The monthly Physiological Chemistry Seminar counted among its guest speakers Dr. A. W. Pollister, Columbia University, who spoke on "Studies of Nucleoproteins in Cytological Preparations"; Dr. A. Tannenbaum, Michael Reese Hospital, "Some Dietary Aspects of Tumor Formation in Mice"; Dr. J. Greenstein, National Cancer Institute, "Intracellular Peptidase and Amidase Systems"; Dr. B. B. Brodie, N.Y.U. Medical College, "The Fate of Drugs in Man"; and Prof. H. Heller, University of Bristol, "Regulatory Mechanisms of Water and Salt Metabolism."

Also, Dr. M. B. Allen of this Department presented her results on "Thermic Adaptation Phenomena in Microbes." "Monomolecular Layers in Biological Systems" was the subject of a double program participated in by Dr. Eric Hutchinson, Fordham University, and Dr. T. Hayashi, Columbia. The Seminar had the privilege of hearing one of the last public lectures by the late Dr. Leonor Michaelis of the Rockefeller Institute, who gave a lecture with experimental demonstrations on "General Principles of the Action of Oxidative Enzymes."

Two members of the Department participated in the First International Biochemical Congress in Cambridge, England, presenting papers on "The Dynamic Nature of Thermophily" and "Electrophoretic Studies on Normal and Pathological Sera." The Assistant Chemist discussed and demonstrated the application of electrophoresis of serum proteins to clinical problems before groups at Georgetown University Medical School, Jewish Hospital of Brooklyn, Lebanon Hospital and the Annual Meeting of Military Surgeons.

The Chemist inspected a number of recently erected laboratory buildings. Many of the features seen will be incorporated in the plans for the new laboratory building. Places inspected were: the Nuclear Studies Institute and Oak Ridge and Argonne National Laboratories, the Bell Research Laboratories, Esso Research Center, Georgetown University and George Washington University Medical School, Mellon Institute, Menorah Hospital of Kansas City, the Institute for Medical Research, and Cedars of Lebanon Hospital, Los Angeles.

ENDOCRINOLOGY RESEARCH

Analytical methods for the determination of estrogen and gonadotropin in urine have been set up. In combination with the previously introduced methods for urinary keto-steroids, hydroxysteroids and serum electrolytes, these methods provide now a well integrated system for clinical and experimental investigations of steroid hormones. An ultraviolet spectrophotometric method was developed for the detection and evaluation of androstadienone, a substance which appears in the urine in the presence of adrenocortical hyperfunction.

Among experimental achievements, the isolation of hyaluronic acid as a significant constituent of cock's comb must be recorded. The use of adrenocorticotrophic hormone in muscular disease and the interrelationship between the adrenal cortex and the thyroid gland were further explored. The effect of such hormonal agents as adrenocorticotrophic hormone, cortisone, desoxicorticosterone and various sex hormones upon the so-called "ground-substance" was studied, using the cock's comb as substrate.

GASTROENTEROLOGY RESEARCH

As in previous years, many investigations conducted in the Gastroenterology Research Laboratory were in collaboration with clinical departments of the Hospital. These activities covered a wide range of gastrointestinal problems, especially concerning pancreatitis, peptic ulcer, cancer of the stomach, pernicious anemia, ulcerative colitis and psychiatric correlatives of some of these diseases. Some basic physiological phenomena of clinical significance were also included in the Laboratory program as groundwork for subsequent clinical studies.

In connection with the new surgical approach to the management of pancreatitis, an experimental study was begun in collaboration with Surgical Service "C" on the effects of partial gastric resection on this disease as well as on external pancreatic secretion. As another aspect of the study of this disease, secretin tests for diagnosis were conducted as part of the Hospital routine for both in- and out-patients, and a set of standards—based on normal test values from a large series of patients without pancreatic disease—is being made generally available for use in other clinics.

Post-operative studies of gastric secretory function, in patients on whom vagotomy was done for the cure of peptic ulcer or because of an esophagectomy for cancer, are being continued in collaboration with Surgical Services "C" and "A," with particular emphasis on the results of the insulin test devised in this Laboratory. Pancreatic activity in relation to the vagus nerves was also under investigation on the same patients.

The ulcer problem is being investigated from the following other angles: A statistical analysis of the Hospital records on the acidity changes and therapeutic effects of subtotal gastrectomy after long periods of time; the therapeutic efficacy of eugenol, a new mucus-stimulating agent; a new approach to the diagnosis of duodenal ulcer—in collaboration with the Medical Service—based on the output of the gastric enzyme, pepsin, in the urine of such patients; and a modification of the analytical method for pepsin determinations used for some clinical investigations. A further contribution on the use of protein hydrolysates in managing ulcer patients was reported in a paper on the acid-neutralizing power of several such preparations.

The psycho-physiological studies on patients with fistulae of the gastrointestinal tract—by collaboration with the Psychiatric Service and the Gastrointestinal OPD—were expanded. Some physiological reactions of the stomach were investigated in the course of sham feeding and psychoanalysis, particularly in relation to emotional changes at both the conscious and unconscious levels. Also under study was the relative importance of the third phase of gastric secretion, stimulated by ingested foods after their absorption in the small bowel, a phenomenon of considerable importance in relation to the hypersecretion during the night in ulcer patients. The forerunner of these psychophysiological investigations was on a patient with jejunal fistula, in whom changes in appetite were studied with respect to changes in emotional status, as well as nutritional intake by jejunum. Also, a systematic investigation was initiated in experimental animals with a view to understanding the physiological and psychological factors which constitute hunger and appetite, and to laying a foundation for subsequent clinical studies in obesity and anorexia nervosa.

Several miscellaneous studies of clinical importance are also under way. Literature on the physiological and pathological aspects of pernicious anemia was reviewed for publication as a preliminary to the study of gastric secretion and uropepsin in such patients. Also, in order to acquire a better understanding of the output of gastric secretion, particularly between meals, a study is being carried out on the so-called unstimulated secretion of patients with and without ulcer disease, especially in the light of the neurogenic concept of this disease.

Because of the possibility that lysozyme may be important as an etiological factor in ulcerative colitis, a study was initiated on its presence in patients' colonic tissue and secretion. Concerning the predigested aliment for tube-feeding of patients with jejunostomy, gastrostomy, etc., a procedure was published for preparing the dry material in bulk and for indefinite storage.

A project supported by a grant from the National Cancer Institute of the United States Public Health Service was continued for the fourth year. One line of investigation was the development of reliable analytical methods for the chemical determination of several kinds of gastrointestinal mucin to be used for the routine study of patients with ulcer, gastric cancer, and colitis. Reports on several problems pertaining to gastric mucous physiology, previously investigated under this grant, have already been published: a study on the possible relation of the shedding of cells during mucous secretion in the stomach to cancerous invasion of tissues; a histological investigation of the destruction and regeneration of the gastric mucous barrier in animals; and accompanying changes in physicochemical and microscopic characteristics of the mucous secretion induced by eugenol treatment. Another major problem under this grant has dealt with the cause and development of cancer of the stomach, and a special strain of cancer-susceptible mice, contributed by the National Institutes of Health, is being used for this work. In collaboration with the Department of Pathology, the Papanicolaou technique for diagnosing gastric cancer has also been under investigation.

Because of the Hospital's augmented research activities this Department was called on for statistical analyses with increasing frequency during the year.

The Department participated in three clinical courses given at the Hospital, in addition to presenting its own courses in Gastrointestinal Physiology and the Physiology of Water and Electrolyte Balance. All of these were presented under the Post-graduate Faculty of Medicine of Columbia University. Twelve doctors were engaged in research problems in association with the Laboratory in 1949, thus receiving training in investigative as well as clinical science.

Extramural lectures, conferences, and society meetings at which work of the Department was reported include: Research Staff of Sharp and Dohme, Inc., Glenolden, Pa.; Philadelphia Biochemistry Club, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia; Maimonides Hospital of Brooklyn; Rutgers University, Newark, N. J.; American Physiological Society, Atlantic City; American Gastroenterological Association, Atlantic City; and the American Medical Association, Atlantic City.

PHYSICS

The major effort of the Physics Laboratory in 1949 was again devoted to the medical use of radioactive isotopes and their application as a research tool in clinical medicine.

Besides routine calibration of radiotherapy machines, standardization of radioactive isotopes used in clinical work, maintenance and repair of therapeutic and diagnostic equipment in various departments of the Hospital, the Laboratory was engaged in many other activities.

The Radiophysics group was established during the preceding year for conducting clinical work with radioactive isotopes. This group took care, upon request of the various services, of ward patients and, as the Radiophysics Clinic, of out-patients. Private patients were treated on a private fee basis in 1949. Members of the Radiophysics group decided to recommend that fees to private patients be established and collected by the Hospital; this recommendation was accepted and implemented by the Hospital.

Radioactive isotopes continued to be supplied by the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission, processed, measured and prepared for use in patients. Reliability of standardization techniques established in the preceding year was checked and maintained. The Physicist was appointed to serve as a member of the Subcommittee on Beta and Gamma Ray Measurements of the National Committee on Nuclear Science. Two complete counting circuits for use with Geiger-Muller counters were built in the Laboratory, incorporating features and improvements not available in commercial instruments.

Eight hundred and fifty tracer doses of radioactive iodine were given for diagnostic purposes in cases of suspected Graves' Disease and in thyroid tumors.

Autoradiographs with radioactive iodine were made on the majority of biopsies and on surgical materials where thyroid malignancy was suspected. Three hundred and seventy therapeutic doses were given to patients with Graves' Disease, and treatment was given to some cases of thyroid carcinoma.

The study of radioactive iodine uptakes is becoming a part of the routine work-up of patients with thyroid disfunction.

Therapeutic results of radioiodine treatment of Graves' Disease, with a follow-up to two years, are very encouraging. A few cases of intractable angina were treated by producing myxedema with radioactive iodine. A good result was observed in one patient.

Radioactive phosphorus was used in over 100 cases of polycythemia and in a few cases of leukemia. Most of this work was done in collaboration with the Hematology Department.

A systematic survey of exposure to radiation of hospital personnel working with diagnostic x-ray equipment, in radiotherapy (deep x-ray, radium) and in the Physics Laboratory was conducted and protective measures were checked. No cases of overexposure were found. These studies are generally conducted once a year; in the Physics Laboratory, where the conditions change with increasing isotopes shipments, monitoring of exposure is done regularly.

The importance of radiation protection, particularly due to the growing use of radioactive isotopes, has been acknowledged nationally by the establishment of a National Committee on Radiation Protection. The Hospital Physicist has been appointed to serve on the Subcommittee for Radioactive Waste Disposal and Decontamination.

Microplethysmography, developed in the Physics Laboratory several years ago, continues to be used as part of the routine work-up in patients with congenital heart defects, hypertension and other cardiovascular diseases.

One hundred and twenty urinary calculi have been analyzed by x-ray diffraction.

A number of residents in Radiotherapy have been trained in the use of radioactive isotopes, their measurement and clinical application. Physicians from other hospitals, in New York and out of town, spent varying periods as observers in the Laboratory to familiarize themselves with the handling of radioisotopes, prior to engaging in related work in their institutions.

Under auspices of Columbia University, two 16-week courses in Nuclear Physics in Medicine were given during the winter of 1948-49 and the winter of 1949-50, with 16 and 14 students respectively.

A statistical analysis of the diagnostic significance of iodine uptake by the thyroid gland in Graves' Disease was made, based on the large amount of clinical material accumulated over the past few years.

The disappearance rate of radioactive iodine from the blood in normals and in patients with thyroid disfunction was investigated, using new high-sensitivity measuring instruments. The shift of ionized iodine in protein bound iodine was also studied in collaboration with the Chemistry Laboratory.

As part of a new approach to improve therapy of thyroid malignancy with radioactive iodine, a study of iodine half-life in bone marrow of rats was initiated.

A study of incidence of masked Graves' Disease in patients with auricular fibrillation was undertaken, using radioactive iodine excretion as test technique.

In collaboration with the Neurological Service and the Radiotherapy Department, work was begun on diagnosing and localizing brain tumors, using diiodofluorescein tagged with radioactive iodine.

Studies of differential uptake of radioactive phosphorus by malignant tumors were continued. It appears that malignant tumors take up more phosphorus than normal tissues and that this may be used for diagnostic purposes when the tumors are located superficially.

The method for tagging red blood cells with radioactive phosphorus, developed in 1948 and used for determination of blood volume, has now been applied to the study of exchange transfusion and to the development of optimum procedures in such transfusions.

Substantial amounts of radioactive iron have been received from the Atomic Energy Commission and its use in the study of anemias has been started.

Since little was known about tissue dose due to beta radiation of radioactive isotopes, an extensive study was undertaken, at first on beta radiation of radioactive phosphorus, to determine such dosage. Experimental work was done with sources of known geometry, using an extrapolation ionization chamber. A theory was worked out, extending the observed data to a variety of conditions. It is planned to continue this work and to investigate beta radiation of other isotopes. This project was supported by the U. S. Atomic Energy Commission and by the American Cancer Society.

Dosage measurements of therapeutic x-rays have been made in water phantoms with specially designed ionization chambers to obtain more precise and detailed information on dosage given to patients in radiotherapy. New measurement techniques and ionization chambers have been developed for direct measurement of dosage during actual treatment of patients, both on the surface and in body cavities.

X-ray diffraction studies of the change of molecular orientation in bone showed that normally present high orientation of calcium phosphate in bone is lost in malignant osteoplastic tumors. The mechanism causing orientation in normal bone is being studied, as a first step in an effort to explain the loss of this orientation in malignancy. This work is supported by a grant from the American Cancer Society.

In collaboration with the Psychiatric Service, the Laboratory has attempted to determine whether there is a correlation between the state of activity of the autonomous nervous system as observed in the microplethysmogram and the psychiatric diagnosis. It is planned to extend this investigation to study of patients undergoing psychotherapy.

THE SCHOOL OF NURSING

NOW in its sixty-eighth year, the Mount Sinai Hospital School of Nursing can note with modesty continuing progress in providing nursing education for those who seek it. There has been further revision of the curriculum to avoid overlapping of subject matter. The hours assigned to ward practice during the "medical and surgical block" were reduced to 26 a week to give students more time for leisure and other study. There were several resignations from the faculty during the year, but we were able to find competent successors.

On February 10, 1949, the sixty-sixth commencement exercises of the School were held in the Blumenthal Auditorium. Sixty-one students were graduated. The commencement was made particularly enjoyable by the stimulating addresses of the principal speaker, Mr. John Hayes, the Superintendent of Lenox Hill Hospital and former president of the American Hospital Association, and Dr. Ralph Colp, Chairman of the School's Medical Committee. We were greatly honored to have them on the program.

The Student Association continued its many activities, including teas, a glee club, informal and formal dances and athletics. Much of this was made possible by the Albert W. Scholle Fund. It is gratifying to note that, through an amateur fashion show conducted by the students, sufficient funds were raised to "adopt a child" through the Foster Parents' Plan for War Orphans—an act that was a credit to the student body.

The importance of happy students cannot be overestimated in considering the appeal of the School to its own students as well as to prospective applicants. We are achieving this appeal through the social program, the pleasant physical surroundings of the student residence and the stimulus of the faculty. The results may be found in the number of candidates seeking entrance to the School and the manner in which they are referred here. In September 1949, for example, the School enrolled 101 young women—its largest entering class in years—and many of them came here on the counsel of our own former graduates.

Student health continues at a satisfactory level. In this connection, much credit is due to Dr. E. Z. Epstein, an Adjunct Physician of the Hospital, who is the Physician to the School. He is most conscientious in the performance of his duties and generous with the time he devotes to the student body. We are indebted also to other physicians connected with the Hospital who have contributed their services. We are grateful that so many of them, despite their duties, have found time to give the student body courses in their specialties. Particular mention must be made of Dr. Fred Brown, a member of the Hospital's Psychiatric Unit, who has accepted an appointment to give our students a course in psychology.

An important change has been made with respect to some of the scholarships and awards made possible by grants from generous contributors. The Committee of the Faculty on Scholarships and Awards, in fact the entire faculty, have felt for some time that changes were in order. Their report has had the consideration of the Committee on Instruction of the Board of Directors of the School, of which Mr. Randolph Guggenheimer was formerly chairman, and of which Mr. William J. Kridel is now chairman. As a result of the work of the Committee, new criteria have been set up for the award of the Blumenthal and Guggenheim Scholarships and further study is being given with respect to other awards. Indicated changes will be effected if it is possible within the terms of the respective grants, or if the consent of donors or their representatives is otherwise available.

The faculty, as usual, contributed to many important professional activities beyond the work of the School and Hospital. Miss Wolfson, Assistant Superintendent of Nurses, assisted in a study, made by the National League of Nursing Education, of the assignments of Nursing Aides in the care of medical and surgical patients. The results were published in the American Journal of Nursing. Miss Reich, Medical Supervisor, collaborated with several doctors on the Hospital Staff in an article for the American Journal of Nursing on "A Psychosomatic Unit in a General Hospital." Miss Warman, Principal of the School and Superintendent of Nurses, was for the third time appointed by Columbia University as a special lecturer on nursing education in the hospital administration course given by the School of Public Health.

We continued to assist in the professional growth of our staff by affording financial aid for advanced study. Miss Ruth Salzman, Clinical Instructor in Medical Nursing, was granted a year's leave of absence to complete studies for her degree at Teachers College, Columbia.

Faculty members represented our School at many professional meetings, including the National League of Nursing Education convention in Cleveland last May, and the State Nurses Association and the State League of Nursing Education conclave in Buffalo last October. The Student Association president represented the students at the state convention. Also, a faculty member attended, at Teachers College, a three-day workshop conference on the new National Nursing Accrediting Service, which was formed by the merger into a single group of the three existing units. The unified service is operated on a voluntary basis. The first accredited list approved by the new service, published in October, included schools, such as Mount Sinai's, which were formerly approved by the National League of Nursing Education. Our School is therefore on the accredited list for 1949.

During the year, a questionnaire survey of accredited schools of nursing in N. Y. State was made by a committee appointed by the Board of Directors of the National Nursing Organizations. The aim was to review the educational facilities of the nation's basic nursing programs. This resulted in a report called the "Interim Classification of Schools of Nursing," in which 25 per cent of the schools were rated in Group I, 50 per cent in Group II and the remainder were unclassified either for lack of reporting or poor standards. We are pleased to report that our School was in Group I.

The New York City League of Nursing Education sponsored last March an Institute, at which we were invited to give a demonstration of the group conference method of teaching in a psychosomatic unit. Miss Salzman, six student nurses and Drs. Harry Weinstock, Solon S. Bernstein, Benedict Bernstein and Fred Brown participated. The institute was held in our Nurses' Residence and was attended by 325 nurses.

The House Committee of the Board of Directors, of which Mrs. George Lee is Chairman, directed further physical improvements in the School of Nursing Residence. All bedroom floor halls and rooms were painted in pastel colors and new lighting fixtures were installed. These changes were greatly appreciated by the Faculty, graduates and students alike.

The efforts of the Nursing Service this year have been directed largely towards the maintenance of a stabilized service for patients. Although the shortage of general staff nurses persisted we were able to supplement the staff by engaging per diem nurses. With this group and the Nursing Aides, who are trained on the job, we were able to provide satisfactory patient care. We trust that the year ahead will enable us to fill all positions so that the School of Nursing and the Nursing Department may continue to progress without the difficulties of recent years.

I must at this point record the untimely death during the year of Mr. Joseph S. Reckford, First Vice-President and a Director of the School. Mr. Reckford was deeply interested in our work and devoted considerable time to it. His death is an incalculable loss. Aware of this loss, Mr. George B. Bernheim, President Emeritus of the Hospital, has graciously accepted election as a Director and as First Vice-President of the School, affording us again the benefit of his experience and wisdom.

THE SOCIAL SERVICE DEPARTMENT

THERE was in 1949 an increasing acceptance of social factors by the medical and nursing staff, a trend noted in our last report. Members of the Social Service staff continued to evaluate the Department's activities, but due to a shortage of supervisory personnel, this did not proceed as rapidly as we had hoped.

With the doctors' interest in special medical and surgical conditions, our caseworkers on the wards found it necessary to work with problems especially related to these illnesses. Many patients under study have chronic diseases and require assistance in obtaining post-hospital care. This is often difficult to arrange because of the community's limited facilities. The number of patients with extensive head and neck surgery has increased and they need intensive casework service to enable them to accept the temporary facial disfiguration preceding restorative work.

We also had the problem of caring for a greater number of elderly men living alone who, following Genito-Urinary surgery, were not well enough to resume their former way of life. Assisting them in finding a place to live taxes the ingenuity of the caseworker, as these patients do not require to be placed in a nursing home and are usually not welcome in a boarding home because of their condition.

A closet containing sickroom supplies was made available to the staff for patients in need of home care after leaving the hospital. There are wheelchairs, backrests, pillows, sheets, and many other useful articles necessary to the comfort of the patient.

One of the Pediatric conferences held in the Blumenthal Auditorium was devoted to the subject of Social Service and afforded our staff the opportunity to clarify and reinterpret the role of the caseworker on the Pediatric Wards and in the Clinics. The Social Service Director gave a summary of the functions of medical social workers, stressing particularly the importance of teamwork between the physician and the social worker. Caseworkers assigned to this service discussed specific cases whose medical histories had been presented by the resident physician.

During the poliomyelitis epidemic, all children admitted with this disease, including private and semi-private cases, were treated on one ward. The social worker had contact with practically all the patients and their families. This experience proved that the need for casework service is not restricted to ward patients.

In reviewing recreational activities for children on the wards, we wish to mention one of the highlights, a puppet show, composed, directed, and acted by an 11-year old boy. He first dictated the play to the kindergarten teacher and then enlisted the help of another boy of his age to act a supporting part. The construction of the scenery and props was a project in which all the children participated. Another interesting feature was a spontaneous dance given by an eight-year old girl in the playroom, to which the ambulant children are taken in the afternoon. In both instances, the individual child was given an opportunity to express his own particular gifts. This has been balanced by group projects in which each child can participate as little or as much as his physical and creative energies allow. The purpose of the program is to keep the children happy and distract their interest from their physical ailments.

The two social workers assigned to the Medical Clinics have worked under great pressure, due to the discontinuance of some of the afternoon clinics and the transfer of patients to the morning clinics. Clinic sessions are held on several floors, requiring our workers to spend a great deal of time in going back and forth. The addition of a case aide to this service was most helpful.

With the addition of three new clinics, the Adolescent Clinic, the Ward Liaison Psychosomatic Clinic and the OPD Liaison Psychosomatic Clinic, the volume of work increased so much that it will be necessary to add to our staff. Tutoring, formerly the responsibility of the Social Service Department, has now been assumed by the Division of Psychology.

Every clinic patient in the 16 to 21-year old group is now assigned to the caseworker who obtains developmental and background history and establishes contact with his family for the purpose of evaluating his adjustment in the home. On the Psychiatric Ward, the caseworker now follows the same procedure in practically all cases. This knowledge, with the material the psychiatrist obtains from the patient, enables physician and worker to formulate a plan of treatment.

We were again, last October, able to accept two students from the New York School of Social Work, assigning one to a worker in the Children's Psychiatric Clinic, and the other to a worker on the Adult Psychiatric Service.

At staff meetings, the granting of relief in a medical social service department was carefully studied. Aspects of the problem were presented by caseworkers under the direction of our educational supervisor. A review of the Department's practices in recording is now in progress.

Thirteen workers on our staff received scholarships to take courses at schools of social work.

From November 18, 1948 to December 3, 1949, when the Neustadter Home was closed, it was necessary to seek other facilities for patients in need of convalescence. We were successful in placing many of them, but we experienced difficulty in finding homes for colored and for the sicker patients. We wish to thank the homes that accepted our patients, particularly the Loeb Home, the Burke Foundation, and the Brooklyn Jewish Home for Convalescents. During the year we had the opportunity to review our function in referring patients to the Neustadter Home. It was decided that for the present, the Social Service Department would continue to act as the admitting office for the Home. The increased number of beds will make it possible to accept semi-private and private patients as well as ward patients.

In addition to the convalescent care provided throughout the year, we sent 247 children to camps and convalescent homes during the school vacation period. The medical consultant continued to render a most important service in giving caseworkers a careful estimate of each applicant's physical condition. The children selected were limited to the most urgent cases, as the expense and limited facilities necessitated careful consideration of each child's physical, emotional and social needs.

As reported in previous years, we are still confronted with problems related to poor housing, unemployment, the chronically ill and the aged. Fortunately, facilities for cardiac children are increasing. Two cardiac homes are able to care for more children and a new home care project has given us an additional resource for some patients suffering from rheumatic fever.

The special needs of Department of Welfare clients (of which there is a larger number owing to unemployment) have taken a great deal of the workers' time, not only in the filling out of forms, but in the necessary follow-up to expedite service. Early in the year our Director and supervisors met with representatives of the administrative staff of the Department of Welfare to discuss mutual problems. Last Autumn representatives of hospital social service departments conferred with Department of Welfare workers to consider difficulties and to clarify relationships.

For the twelve months ending November 1, 1949, volunteers gave 25,332 hours service in the Hospital. The average number of volunteers per month was 108, the average number of hours was 2,111.

A group of professional workers, physicians, technicians and a psychologist also serve in the Hospital as volunteers but are not included in this report. They are assigned directly through the office of the Hospital Director.

A group from the Spanish-speaking community have of late taken an active interest in helping to find Spanish-speaking volunteers. They are badly needed as interpreters in our clinics and we are happy to have the co-operation of this group. The most encouraging part of our volunteer program, in addition to the services provided for the Hospital, is the large number of volunteers, almost half of our monthly average who return for a second or third year and some for many years. We feel that these workers have a continuing interest in the Hospital and its patients, and we are most grateful to them.

We were handicapped last year by personnel changes in occupational therapy. The customary work was carried on with greater difficulty and in addition a group of poliomyelitis patients from the Children's Wards received functional treatment. Mrs. Hugo Kastor who had been Chairman of the Committee for many years asked to be relieved of her responsibilities. Her resignation was accepted with much regret. We are happy to know that she will continue to take an active part in the Occupational Therapy Department. Mrs. William D. Scholle has consented to become Chairman of the Committee and Mrs. John Rosenthal has interested herself in the holiday toy project.

We have been fortunate in having a group of volunteers who for many years have given valuable assistance in the preparation of work for the patients, thereby enabling our occupational therapists to devote more attention to patients personally.

Our Workroom, a project in rehabilitation established in 1933, has continued to be most helpful to a group of our patients. Last year 31 women and 16 men participated in the work. The fact that they are paid for their work and that the articles produced are salable has definite therapeutic value for patients. A successful sale of the articles brought in $6,728.10.

The Patients' Library has continued to distribute books throughout the adult wards. This is a welcome service for the right book to the right patient at the right time brings great relief from monotony and tensions. Donations of books from friends of the Hospital are gratefully received.

The members of our Board demonstrate their interest in the Department by both working within the Hospital and co-operating with outside agencies. They have taken an active part in the fund-raising campaigns of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies and the United Hospital Fund whose financial support is so necessary to the continuation of our work.

The strength of our Department necessarily depends upon our professional workers. We take this opportunity to express our appreciation to our Director, Mrs. Mendelsohn, and to her staff for their accomplishments in the past year.

THE NEUSTADTER HOME FOR CONVALESCENTS

THE year 1949 marked a turning point in the history of the Neustadter Home. An exhaustive study of the needs of the Home had been made by our Survey Committee under the able chairmanship of Mrs. Edwin C. Vogel. Out of that study arose the decision to renovate completely the original buildings and to add a new, modern wing to be called the Moses Weinman Memorial Building. In the first eleven months of the year the renovation of existing facilities and construction of the new building were completed, and the "Greater Neustadter" finally emerged. On December 12, 1948, the last patient had been discharged. All contracts had been let and the builders took over. Mrs. Edmonds, our Superintendent, and her staff showed remarkable loyalty in living under almost impossible conditions so that the builders could start work immediately.

I would like to mention the fact that when we closed the Home, our staff, both professional and domestic, received due consideration, and were given the opportunity of working at The Mount Sinai Hospital. This many of them did. We are grateful indeed for the cooperation of the Trustees, Director, and heads of staff of the Hospital. Not until November 3, 1949, did the Home reopen, and on that day eleven patients were admitted.

As a result of the changes we can now accommodate 69 patients instead of 56 as formerly. We have far greater flexibility and, depending upon Mount Sinai's requirements, can adapt our units to accommodate more men or more women.

Among the important new facilities are a beautiful occupational therapy department, the generous gift of Mrs. Hugo Kastor. There is also a hospitality shop, given in memory of Mr. Henry Ittelson, which frequently is the busiest center in the Home. This is staffed by women of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Beverly Crest Community Association and the Lincoln Park Jewish Center, who volunteer their services. This is the first time in the history of Neustadter that there has been this neighborhood participation.

There is also a large recreational assembly room complete with stage, which has been equipped with television, piano and radio—all gifts from members of the Board—and a library where guests can relax in quiet. In addition, there is a well-appointed beauty parlor that is an excellent morale builder for patients. This, too, was given by a friend.

More important, we now have the most modern convalescent care facilities, enabling us to give the best type of medical service, under the expert direction of Dr. Herman Zazeela, who is ably assisted by our own excellent nursing staff. As always our slogan remains, "The Patient First."

While the Home was being physically renovated, we reviewed many of our policies and practices. Space does not allow me to enumerate the many meetings held by small committees to work out problems for the better understanding and care of patients and for the more efficient functioning of the Home.

We discussed a more liberal admission policy, including taking patients from Semi-Private. We stressed the importance of hospital charts so that we would have a complete picture of the patient. I am glad to report that this has become routine.

We took up the matter of the psychiatric approach. As a result, we obtained the services of Dr. George W. Naumburg, Jr., as a consultant psychiatrist. Dr. Naumburg, at his discretion, takes up some problems with Dr. M. Ralph Kaufman, in whose department he works.

We went into the subject of closer cooperation between the parent and child, namely, Mount Sinai and Neustadter, emphasizing the value of this affiliation.

We devised a new system for visiting. This permits each patient to receive all his visitors but, by the use of visiting cards, limits visitors to two at a time. Visitors in excess of two are asked to wait until one of the two visitors completes his visit. Also, a new brochure, which includes pictures of the exterior and interior of the new Home, has been issued.

A Personnel Committee was appointed and is already hard at work. In this connection, we follow the practices of Mount Sinai as far as possible with regard to nurses' hours, salaries, increments, holidays, etc. We are also considering the important matter of physiotherapy and hope to establish such a department in the near future. Dr. William Bierman has been most helpful in this regard.

On December 4, 1949, the Home was formally re-opened, and if the comments heard from the many visitors mean anything, we may be proud of our present accomplishments and hopeful for the future. Dr. George Baehr gave the dedication address.

We have had a devoted and dedicated team, including our Building Chairman, co-chairman, and committee members, architects, builders, staff, expert advisors, and our own Board. We hope the results of all these "labors of love" have made for better community service in the broadest sense of the word.

There are still many rough spots to be smoothed over, but perhaps the following remarks made by some of the patients tell the story best. One patient was heard to exclaim: "It's a miracle!" Another said: "To think all these good people give their time and thoughts and do so much for us!" Still another patient, after being escorted to her room, remarked: "All my life I have been poor, now for three weeks I can be rich."

There are many people I would like to thank personally. But in a report of this kind all I can do is express my own deep gratitude and satisfaction to all those who, through their constant and selfless devotion, have made our dream come true. For me it was a privilege to work with such a wonderful group of loyal enthusiasts.

A BRIEF STATEMENT OF THE

The cost of operating the Hospital was .....	$4,789,568
To meet a part of this cost, patients paid to the Hospital .....	3,258,327
The difference is the total philanthropic expense for the year .....	1,531,241*
This philanthropic expense was met in greater part by generous grants from the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, the United Hospital Fund, the Greater New York Fund, the City of New York, etc., and income from general endowment funds, leaving a net deficit for the year of .....	7,323

* * * * *

An analysis of the cost included in the above total operating expenses of the Hospital revealed that:

Approximately $3,999,000 was spent for the care of 15,998 patients who were admitted to the Hospital. Of these patients, over 50 percent were cared for in the wards, free or below cost.

Approximately $560,000 was spent in the Hospital's eighty-five Out-Patient clinics for care of needy patients.

Approximately $230,000 was spent for Social Service work for 7,843 patients, to help solve economic and social problems which prolonged illness so often involves.

The above operating expenses do not include approximately $369,000 spent for medical and scientific research, postgraduate medical education, and other projects not classified as annual maintenance of the Hospital. These activities are supported by funds which have been donated by generous sponsors and allocated for such purposes.

The future of our Hospital is dependent upon the rebuilding of its capital funds. Large deficits of the past twenty years have drawn upon reserves, donated in prior years, to the extent of over two and three-quarter million dollars. These deficits could have been avoided only by curtailing in quantity or quality, or both, the services rendered by the Hospital to the sick poor of the City.

To meet the increased needs of the community and to keep abreast of new horizons in medicine, our Trustees formulated in 1942 a plan for post-war development. This program included the building of a Maternity Pavilion and an Institute of Biogenetics; an expansion in facilities for Psychiatry; the creation of new research and routine laboratories, professional offices and other auxiliary facilities; enlargement of the program of medical education to include courses at the postgraduate level for reorientation or specialized training of physicians returned from military service; and an increase in fellowship grants and other facilities for advanced scientific research. As noted in the President's Report, the program is under way.

In addition to the Hospital's need for capital funds for maintenance and for the full realization of the above expansion program, capital donations, establishment of memorial funds, and legacies are urgently needed for the ever-expanding services which the Hospital is called upon to supply.

Extracts from the Constitution on Establishment of Life, Memorial and Perpetual Beds and Other Funds

- A contribution of $2,500 to the general funds of the corporation, if accepted by the Board of Trustees, shall establish a Life Bed. Such contribution shall entitle the donor thereof, during his or her lifetime, to name a patient from time to time to occupy one bed in the wards of the Hospital, free of charge.
- A contribution of $3,500 to the general funds of the corporation, if accepted by the Board of Trustees, shall establish a Memorial Bed. Such a contribution shall entitle the donor thereof, during his or her lifetime, to name a patient from time to time to occupy one bed in the wards of the Hospital, free of charge. Such donor may bequeath that right to a successor appointed by the said donor in his or her last will and testament, or by any other instrument under seal. In the event of such successor being appointed, the rights hereinbefore mentioned shall continue for a period of not over fifty years from the date of such contribution, provided, however, that such period shall be extended so that it shall in no event end until ten years after the death of the donor.
- A contribution of $5,000 to the general funds of the corporation, if accepted by the Board of Trustees, shall establish a Perpetual Bed in the Children's Pavilion. Such contribution shall entitle the donor thereof, during his or her lifetime, to name a patient from time to time to occupy one bed in the wards of the Children's Pavilion, free of charge. Such donor may bequeath that right to a successor appointed by said donor in his or her last will and testament, or by any other instrument under seal. When a corporation is the donor, the privilege shall expire at the end of twenty-five years from the date of such contribution.
- A contribution of $7,500 to the general funds of the corporation, if accepted by the Board of Trustees, shall establish a Perpetual Bed, but where, under the provision of any will executed prior to March 20, 1921, the sum of $5,000 or more is bequeathed to the corporation in payment of any Perpetual Bed, the Board of Trustees may, at their option, accept such sum in payment of such Perpetual Bed. Such contribution shall entitle the donor thereof, during his or her lifetime, to name a patient from time to time to occupy one bed in a ward of the Hospital, free of charge. Such donor may bequeath that right to a successor appointed by said donor in his or her last will and testament, or by any other instrument under seal. When a corporation is the donor, the privilege shall expire at the end of twenty-five years from the date of such contribution.
- Tablets to commemorate the establishment of Life, Memorial, and Perpetual Beds shall be placed in a ward or in such other place as may be set aside for the purpose. Tablets for Life Beds shall be maintained during the life of the donor. Tablets for Memorial Beds shall be maintained for a period not beyond fifty years from the date of their establishment, provided, however, that such period shall be extended so that it shall in no event end until ten years after the death of the donor. Tablets for Perpetual Beds shall be maintained in perpetuity.
- A donor may change a Life Bed established by him or her to a Memorial Bed by making an additional contribution of $1,000, or to a Perpetual Bed by making an additional contribution of $5,000, or may change a Memorial Bed to a Perpetual Bed by making an additional contribution of $4,000.
- No patient shall be admitted to the privileges pertaining to a Life, Memorial, or Perpetual Bed unless he shall comply with the current rules of the corporation and be a proper subject for treatment under its regulations.
- An endowment for the establishment of any special fund may be accepted by a resolution of the Board of Trustees. Such fund may be created for special or general purposes under the name of one or more persons or otherwise. If created for a special purpose the fund shall be used only for that purpose. Additions to any fund may be made at any time and in any amount, but no fund shall be created with an initial endowment of less than $10,000.
- Gifts of any sums whatsoever may be made to one or more special funds for non-budgetary purposes, the principal and income of which may be appropriated by the Board of Trustees as the needs may arise for purposes not covered by the regular budget of the corporation.
- In the case of a bequest which does not in all respects conform to the conditions herein set forth, the Board of Trustees may, in its discretion, accept the same in accordance with the provisions of such bequest.
